

Tax Pointer?

Spending Exceeds Ottawa Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will exceed its self-imposed spending target by $335,000,000 in the current fiscal year according to revised estimates brought before Parliament Wednesday.

Rapidly rising payments in programs under provincial control will wipe out a long list of federal budget cuts, leaving the government with record spending of $12,251,930,586, the estimates forecast.

The figure includes a first-year cost of $35,000,000 for medical care insurance and a separate bill for old age pensions of $1,581,000,000.

NEW DEPARTMENTS

The government's reorganization of departments made the revision of estimates necessary.

In the Commons, opposition MPs were quick to notice the escalating costs and to ask what had happened since the original estimates for the fiscal year ending next March 31 were tabled seven months ago.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury started to reply, conceding "an increase in the total," and was drowned out by opposition hoots and jeers.

DEBT COSTS

The total amount is three per cent more than the $11,965,732,032 included in the original estimates.

Payments towards hospital insurance, welfare and post-secondary education programs together show increases of $229,000,000 from the February totals. Public debt costs are up by $67,157,700 to $1,474,006,900.

Both Finance Minister Edgar Benson and his predecessor Mitchell Sharp have promised to hold budgetary spending this year to $10,700,000,000, apart from medical care insurance costs.

The part of the estimates defined as "budgetary" total $10,670,330,586 in the revised forecasts released Wednesday. The total in February's original estimates was $10,284,732,032.

There were cuts in all other areas of government except the appropriations for the office.

Trudeau Cuts At Home

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has reduced expenses at his official residence by $800-a-week as part of the government's cost-cutting program in the current fiscal year.

Revised estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday provided $16,300 for the prime minister's residence, down from $21,100, in the original estimates last February.

The food budget is reduced $200 to $2,700, entertainment by $300 to $3,700 and household salaries $200 to $27,000. Trudeau, in line with past practice, has $3,000 deducted from his $45,000 salary to help meet the expenses of running the prime minister's residence.

Road to Democracy

Troop-Flouting Czechs Still Planning Reform

PRAGUE (AP) — With more than 500,000 Warsaw Pact troops still occupying Czechoslovakia, the nation's reform-minded Communist party reaffirmed Wednesday it will press on with reforms designed to make the party function more democratically.

The reform is contained in the party's proposed statutes, which have been criticized in the Soviet Union as being counter-revolutionary. They were first published 10 days before the Soviet military invasion.

The new statutes would provide such reforms as secret balloting and publication of minority opinions. Both are in opposition to Moscow-style communism.

The reassertion came against a background of delays in a trip to Moscow by the Czechoslovak leadership to discuss further Soviet demands aimed at curbing liberal reforms and a withdrawal of some of the troops.

There were rumors that Soviet and Czechoslovak leaders had sharp differences over the composition of the Czechoslovak delegation and over the agenda.

The reassertion proved the party's determination to continue its reforms.

Primate's Views on Pope's Encyclical:

Acts in Good Faith No Sin

● Liberal Dutch scholar faces Vatican heresy trial. Page 10.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Maurice Cardinal Roy, Roman Catholic primate of Canada, said Wednesday those who use contraceptive measures in good faith are not guilty of a sin.

"That is the general principle of moral theology," Cardinal Roy told a news conference at the Canadian Catholic Conference. (See also Page 10.)

"If one is in good faith, even if his idea is wrong, he is not guilty of a sin. But to be in good faith, one must be prudent."

"You must have serious reasons and not only just an impression of the moment," the cardinal, here to take part in the semi-annual meeting of Canadian bishops, was replying to a question on the Pope's encyclical.

He said he was agreeing with a statement by bishops in Belgium that said Catholics should follow an informed conscience.

The 80 bishops attending the conference are trying to map out a statement on the encyclical to be released Thursday night for guidance of Canada's 8,500,000 Catholics.

"I don't want to prejudice what the bishops will say," the cardinal said. "This has to be said very carefully."

"We have to deal with those who have not understood, have not accepted, the truth or love (of the encyclical) and when we have to say are they in sin or not in sin."

Bishop G. Emmett Carter of London, Ont., said earlier the conference is not trying to write a new encyclical but only trying to offer guidance on its application.

He said the encyclical is accepted as a fact.

Asked if he brought any message from Rome to the bishops to help them in their deliberations, the cardinal said there was no official message but that he "will take part in discussion and bring them my personal assistance."

The cardinal, who is also Archbishop of Quebec, arrived here from Rome earlier Wednesday.

He is president of a pontifical commission on justice and peace and also of a lay council, both with headquarters in Rome.

The cardinal said the lay commission meetings are developing slowly because various countries do not want a council in Rome to "control the national organization."

The justice and peace commission deals with study of political, economic and social conditions throughout the world. It advises the Pope prior to his making statements dealing with church policy on such matters.

Cardinal Roy said the biggest problem faced by the commission is one of motivation.

He said it is necessary to motivate peoples of the world to do a little more toward helping developing countries and poverty-stricken regions.

Let Provinces Name Senators, Says B.C.

By IAN STREET, Legislative Reporter

B.C. will propose at the next federal-provincial conference on the constitution that the provinces be given the right to appoint senators, with representation being determined on a population basis, Premier Bennett announced Wednesday.

The premier told a press conference that the provincial government would take a firm position that the senate should either be "reorganized" or abolished.

He also said B.C. was seeking "a floor on the purchasing power" of Canadians from coast to coast. The way to correct regional disparity, the premier added, was to cancel the present equalization payments to the poorer provinces in favor of financial assistance provided directly to those in the low-income group.

UNIFORM STANDARD

A start could be made, Mr. Bennett suggested, with those in the worst-paid ranks of the labor force by adopting a uniform minimum wage standard across Canada.

The press conference took place when the premier advised reporters of his plan to travel by PGE train to Saturday ceremonies marking the turning on of power generated at the W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River. Other participants and invited guests are travelling to Portage Mountain in three chartered aircraft.

Mr. Bennett said he would not tell his critics, "I told you so," now that the giant project had been virtually completed.

ANSWER ENOUGH

"When the power from the Peace hits Vancouver, that will be answer enough. This will be the brightest day in our history for the people of British Columbia. I remember all the scoffers, the critics who said it couldn't be done, we couldn't transmit power over that distance, and that the government should be kicked out of office."

The premier said the province's "two-river policy" had worked "wonderfully well" and added: "I don't blame the critics—I just feel sorry for them."

Mr. Bennett said the proposal for appointment of senate representatives would be discussed at the next federal-provincial conference.

Johnson Warning

Our Troubles, Not Yours, France Told

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Premier Daniel Johnson warned France Wednesday in effect to stay out of Quebec's troubles with English-speaking Canada if it values the province as the biggest French-language bastion of the New World.

"If I believed that in our relations with France the French were trying to destroy our country, I would consider it my duty not to continue relations with France," Johnson told a nationally televised and broadcast news conference.

He added that French President de Gaulle, who shocked Canadians during a visit here last year by telling a crowd "Vive Quebec Libre"—Long Live Free Quebec—"can have his opinion on the Canadian Confederation, and we can have our own. (See also Page 26.)"

SETTLED HERE

"This problem will be settled in Canada," he said.

Johnson, who flies to Paris next month for talks with de Gaulle and a reception normally reserved for heads of state, spelled out his stand on the French government's possible influence on Quebec policies at his first news conference since he suffered a heart attack July 3. He returned here last week from a holiday in Bermuda.

He said that mounting reports of French moves to interfere in the future of Quebec, a province that is bigger than France.

Question Shuffle Flayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced a "trial" system Wednesday whereby cabinet ministers will not have to be in the Commons for every daily question period. The plan drew sharp opposition criticism.

Trudeau told the House that all ministers would try to attend the question period on Wednesday and two other days. He would aim for daily attendance.

At present, all ministers available in the capital attend the question session daily. The question periods, by House rules, last from 30 minutes to one hour. Only a half hour is set aside Wednesday.

'Are You Going All the Way?'

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — A newspaper reporter who tried to buy an airline ticket at Philadelphia International Airport while wearing a parachute found that the airlines want no part of do-it-yourself safety programs.

Pottstown Mercury editor Robert Boyle assigned Gary Catt, 22, to the story and it was printed Wednesday.

Catt walked into the airport's main building with the parachute strapped on his back and immediately found a security guard with a walkie-talkie following him up the escalator.

The reporter stood in line at the United Airlines counter. Several army paratroopers in the next line stared at him and one finally asked where he was headed.

Catt told him that wearing a parachute might "create panic" among the other passengers "and result in a lack of faith in the reliability and safety of our airline."

Catt refused to check his parachute with the baggage and did not get a ticket.

As Catt was leaving, he heard one man ask another, "Are they giving parachutes to all passengers?"

When he reached the counter, the woman clerk asked him what he had on his back and he replied, "A parachute. It's my first trip and I'm scared."

The clerk decided to check with the manager, who told Catt to take off the chute or he couldn't get a ticket.

Armed Forces Ranks Fall Below 100,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower strength of the armed forces dropped by nearly 5,000 in the first six months of this year, the Commons was informed Wednesday.

In written replies to Michael Forrestall (PC-Dartmouth-Hal-fax East) and Douglas Harkness (PC-Calgary Centre), Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said strength of the armed forces at July 1 was 99,817 compared with 104,804 at Jan. 1. The number of officers declined by 586 to 17,733 and the number of men by 4,301 to 82,024.

Union Official Out of Prison

VANCOUVER (CP) — Homer Stevens, 44, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, was released from prison Wednesday after serving more than 10 months of a one-year sentence for contempt of court.

Stevens and union president H. (Steve) Stavness were jailed after they refused to order workers to handle fish during a strike in Prince Rupert, as directed by a B.C. Supreme Court injunction.

Spending Over Mark of the Governor-General, and for the cost of running Parliament itself.

One of the projects recently thought a possible victim in the budget chop — the proposed Prince Edward Island Causeway — remains, with an appropriation of $5,000,000 for work to be done this year.

DEFENCE CUTS
Defence appropriations, listed Feb. 12 as $1,728,591,800 are down $15,637,000 to total $1,712,954,800.

Benson, preparing a taxing budget for Parliament next month, has said that only small adjustments will be needed in taxing and spending to bring the budget into balance.

The fact that spending now is scheduled to be higher than originally forecast seemed to indicate higher taxes will be levied.

The revised blue-covered book of estimates was tabled by Drury, who said they represent reductions in controllable spending, more than counterbalanced by the natural growth of spending program to which Parliament is already committed and by some new projects.

Some $30,000,000 was cut from items that Parliament must vote afresh each year, and that the government-run control. But many statutory spending programs are geared to the growth of population such as family allowances — and the activities of provincial governments, such as in education.

Drury said increases in federal payments for hospital insurance, for welfare payments to the needy, blind and disabled, and for post-secondary school education account for some $229,000,000 of the $433,000,000 increase in statutory spending requirements.

An additional contingency item was included in the proposed appropriations for $25,000,000 to cover the cost of anticipated public service salary adjustments arising out of collective bargaining.

Apart from the normal departmental appropriations and the old age pension payments, the government raised its budget for loans, investments and advances, mainly to Crown corporations.

These now total $684,526,812 for the current fiscal year, compared with $745,105,609 in 1967-68 and the sharp cut to $484,900,000 which was listed in the blue book last February.

Drury said the increase is mainly attributable to two votes not included in the original 1968-69 estimates: $81,081,000 for the International Development Association and $107,343,750 as a deposit in the Bank of International Settlements to support sterling.

One of the increases contained in the normal budgetary expenditures was for the secretary of state's department, $14,000,000 to cover the cost of the June 25 general election.

Reductions totalling $79,855,934 were announced last March from the original budgetary spending program totalling $10,284,732,032.

representatives by the provinces rather than by the party that happened to be in power in Ottawa would "keep a proper balance in the federal system."

He said senate representation in each province should be determined on a population basis. This would give B.C., which now has six senators in the 105-seat Upper Chamber, at least 10 representatives. None of the B.C. senators are Liberals or New Democrats, the two most powerful political parties provincially.

At past federal provincial conferences, B.C. has opposed the present system of equalization payments to poorer provinces.

CAIRO (Reuters) — Egypt has allayed speculation of an imminent new Middle East conflict and said the situation is no more dangerous than at any time since the war last year.

Burned-Over Food Harmless But Also Without Nutrition

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: My 10-year-old son has a craving for burned-to-a-crisp food. If I have cheese or something in the oven, he won't eat it until it turns black. Hamburgers have to be done to a hard brick.

I am worried because I heard somewhere that the carbon that settles on burned food is injurious to health.

My son promised to abide by your reply. — Mrs. MS.

What you are worrying about probably is related to fat dripping onto hot coals while broiling meat. That, incidentally, appears to be a much overrated matter so far as any risk is concerned.

When you burn your youngster's food, the black stuff is principally charcoal — that is, carbon. It is a harmless substance and, in fact, powdered charcoal is sometimes used medically.

I see no particular harm.

Your Good Health

Therefore — except that the burned part has had the nutritional elements in it destroyed, the carbon and vitamins turned into carbon and the carbohydrate burned off.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had

Batholin's cysts about 20 times in the last five years. They usually break and drain by themselves, but several times I have had to have them drained by doctor. Is the only alternative surgery? — M.M.V.

Yes, because these, like any other cysts, follow the same pattern. A cyst develops when some opening or duct becomes plugged, and matter builds up inside, causing pressure.

The pressure can be relieved by puncturing the cyst and allowing it to drain, but unless the membrane lining of the cyst is removed, the opening can seal over and the entire process repeats itself.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there any way to get rid of the discoloration that is left after a cut healed? My cat has scratched up my legs pretty badly and I am very self-conscious about it.

E.N.

There is no way to hasten the healing in color of the scars — but there are excellent cosmetics (which your doctor or druggist can tell you about) designed to cover such marks.

Better tell your cat to be more careful. There's such a thing as cat-scratch fever which can make you quite ill. Or maybe it would be more effective to have your cat's nails trimmed.

Johnson Gives France Warning

itself, were "seriously exaggerated." He added that he still planned to go to Paris Oct. 11-16 for what he hoped would be one of a series of annual "summit" meetings between Quebec premiers and French leaders, but was interested as much in having French investment in his province as in French cultural and linguistic influence here.

"We are interested in having French investments as well as American investments," Johnson said, referring to literally hundreds of millions of dollars poured into the mineral-rich province by United States enterprises.

By Rusk

Vietnam Critics Slapped

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk took a slap Wednesday night at Johnson administration critics on Vietnam and warned of a trend toward isolationism in the United States and other western nations.

At the 20th anniversary dinner of the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia, he maintained that the backbone of world peace was the mutual security agreements the United States has signed with more than 40 countries since the end of the Second World War.

If collective security, a primary lesson of the last great war, is not satisfactory in the nuclear age, a better solution should be found, Rusk said.

"There are signs that lessons of the past are being forgotten," he said. "A trend towards isolationism has appeared not only in the United States but in other western nations."

Rusk struck out at critics who claim the cost of the Vietnam war has resulted in neglect of a host of domestic problems.

He said that the Gross National Product of the United States — $50 billion a year — was approximately the same as the combined Gross National Product of all of Western Europe, Canada and Japan, and more than twice that of the Soviet Union.

He said the financial cost of the Vietnam War was only about half of the annual increase in the Gross National Product and that the U.S. defense budget was only about the total of the increase in the Gross National Product during the last two years.

"I believe the United States can afford to do what it needs to do both at home and abroad, and that the other economically advanced countries of the free world can afford to spend what is necessary to improve their security, improve their standards of living and assist the developing countries to move forward in independence," Rusk said.

"The problem is not the means, but the will," he added.

Senate Seats For Students

University of Victoria students this week are eligible to file nomination papers for election to three seats on the campus senate.

One graduate student and two undergraduates will be elected to the senate, the body which decides academic matters. Nominations close at 4 p.m. Sept. 30. The election will be held Oct. 11.

Although stressing that Quebec's role in Confederation — the 10-province alliance that several French-language groups would like to break up — was a domestic affair, Johnson staunchly defended France's current intentions in regard to French-Canadians.

He said the federal government "lost its cool" over the case of Philippe Rossion, a French official whose presence at a Manitoba meeting of a French-language cultural group sparked charges that France was trying to split English and French-speaking Canadians.

Rossion, who since has returned to Paris, denied he was involved in any sort of international interference and said he was strictly on a goodwill, cultural visit.

Johnson also touched on the hypothetical issue of Quebec's secession from Canada, and the language rights of French and English-speaking citizens of the province.

He said an "unfortunate leak" in a secrecy pact reached by senior federal and provincial officials at a conference on the future of Confederation at Mont

Gabriel, Que., last May sparked reports that delegates considered the implications of changing Canada from a monarchy to a republic. He said he did not consider this "a priority."

While stating that "it is not up to us to decide whether people want to keep the monarchy or not," he said "Canadian youth is no longer interested in the monarchy." He said this was pointed up in a resolution passed by the Young Liberal organization in Montreal, and by the federal Liberal organization.

Although Quebec province is more than 80 per cent French-speaking and pressure within the province for it to become totally so is growing daily, Johnson pledged he would never force Quebec residents to use other than their natural language.

But he said it was "an absolute necessity" for everyone working in the province to speak French and recognize the "French fact" as it now exists here.

While it was necessary for Quebecers to speak French in their daily business, however, "the future of the English language in Quebec will be brighter than ever," he said.

Mr. Trudeau's Secret

ANYONE WHO HEARS THE STORY can be excused for wondering why it was that an unidentified civil servant in Ottawa caught red-handed trying to sell military secrets was never charged and that his only punishment was pressure which forced him to resign.

According to the Toronto Star, which exposed the incident, it was Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau who, as minister of justice in the government of Mr. Lester Pearson, decided it would not be in the public interest to prosecute.

This is not denied.

But the excuse for the decision is no explanation at all. It does not answer the perfectly reasonable question, for example, of why it would have been in the public interest to bring this suspect to trial. Was it because it might have embarrassed some member of the government? Was it because the man, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested and interrogated had influential friends? These are suspicions which are perfectly natural in the circumstances.

The refusal of Minister of Justice John Turner to disclose the results of the investigation because it would be improper in the absence of charges may be justified. It would certainly be improper to name a suspect, and thus brand him with a stigma which would last his lifetime, guilty or not.

But still unanswered is the question why it was not in the public interest to lay charges in the first place and why, as appears to be the case, he was not immediately dismissed if there was reasonable cause to doubt his integrity.

It may be asked further why Prime Minister Trudeau is determined to guard the secret even from members of the Privy Council.

There was small sign of reluctance on the part of the government of Mr. Pearson to expose all the circumstantial evidence in private files concerning the Gerda Munsinger case, no matter how damaging to character or where suspicion pointed. Yet in a situation where the RCMP believed they had trapped a man who proposed to sell state secrets it is not in the public interest to do anything about it except to force him to resign.

There is a strange inconsistency here.

As for the suggestion that prosecution was avoided in order to prevent the identification of anti-espionage agents—whom government sources have been careful to refrain from denying—that is plain nonsense.

Forward-Looking?

IN REGARD to Canadian scientific endeavor, Prime Minister Trudeau appears to be not thinking along the same lines as some of the government's most expert advisers. Perhaps this assessment is wrong. But it is the impression given by the cancellation of the Okanagan telescope project and then of the intense neutron generator project at Chalk River, Ont.

Both the National Research Council and the Economic Council of Canada in their annual report and review respectively have stressed the need of an expansion of Canadian industrial research and development. Both also, in this connection, have dwelt to some extent on the need to entice the best Canadian scientific and technological talent to stay in Canada.

The NRC, most recently, has said that unless challenging opportunities in research are forthcoming, "a large proportion of our ablest graduates can be expected to leave the country. This represents our most valuable resources, the one we can least afford to lose."

The Economic Council, in its review, maintained that the balance of research and development effort should be shifted toward the performance of a larger share in industry and the universities, an exceptionally large share now being carried out directly by governments and their agencies. It noted however that government support might "be required especially for the more fundamental types of research because the returns here are often far in the future and the elements of risk may be very high." This of course is pertinent when the telescope and intense neutron generator projects are considered.

No less pertinent is this passage: "Scientific and technological work need not always or even most of the time be brilliantly original in order to make a useful contribution to the economy. At the same time, it is desirable to have a number of areas of scientific and technological work where the standard achieved is well above the ordinary. First-class people doing first-class work tend to attract and hold others of the same kind, to improve the general intellectual climate, and to inspire students and co-workers to greater and more productive efforts..."

Both the generator and the Queen Elizabeth Observatory gave promise of first-class people doing first-class work in the forefront of research. But the Liberal MP for Okanagan-Boundary, Mr. Bruce Howard, said in the Commons in his eloquent plea at least to retain the mirror blank for the telescope until the day when Canada could get its shoes half-soled again. "The scientists who would have been Canadians will now give the benefits of their talents to other countries."

The prime minister has stated that the projects were cancelled mainly for economic reasons. It may be so that some new pre-eminence in space and nuclear science is a luxury beyond Canada's current means. But there are many places where spending can be cut and Mr. Trudeau has given the nation no very definite idea of his notion of priorities.

His response to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's demand for a clear government statement of policy on science has been that the cancellations will not deter the government from having a forward-looking science policy. The country will be looking forward to it.

The Throne Speech Disenchantment

By RICHARD JACKSON, Columnist Ottawa Bureau

SO that's it for the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne for this first session of the new Parliament.

Six dull days of dreary drone.

And now the Commons, with that routine exercise in parliamentary fulfillment over and done with until another throne speech raises the curtain on another session, is turning to more productive, and hopefully, livelier business.

So it was dull.

So, too, knowing anything about stuff, stylized, formal, strictly for state occasions throne speeches, expected anything else?

Throne speeches are always uninspiring collections of vague, pedestrian generalities.

This one was flat. The last one was the same. The next one will be no different. They always have been — and likely ever will be — unchanged and unchanging in their disappointment.

The debate which follows a throne speech is similarly unvarying of content: mainly boredom.

The very ground rules — or lack of them — of this particular debate scarcely could produce anything else except a great wide national yawn.

For the honorable members are free to talk about anything and everything under the sun — and usually do.

So the throne speech and its debate honored the tradition of dull disappointment.

But this time there was something else — something new and different — disenchantment.

Because of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, of whom so many had such great expectations. For with him, far more than with any previous prime minister, the image was the man, impossibly golden and larger than life.

Realist as he claims to be, he saw it coming, and in the throne speech, after the customary opening sentence of welcome to the new Parliament — read for him, as British tradition dictates, by the governor general — his next words were:

"Across this land there are great expectations..."

And then he went on to counsel that there could be no instant "Just Society."

But that wasn't the way the millions of Trudeauanites ever dreamed it would be.

For the image was the man, and the image had been, all through those spring and summer weeks of the political honeymoon of a modern worker of miracles, a young wizard, bold, imaginative, inventive, and even revolutionary enough to make it all work out.

Simple and easy as that — a wave of the wonder-working hand — and lo and behold, The Just Society.

The beautiful illusion that the new prime minister — or, even more unrealistically that magic-making image — would go for broke with a dynamic program for the Just Society at a single stroke was a dream.

The hordes of wishful thinkers thought that because Pierre Elliott Trudeau was such a romantic dreamboat and truly terrifically attractive human being in those supermarket performances of the election campaign he could make it all come true.

It was an impossible dream.

But do the impossible dreamers know that, and will all those with stars in their eyes who saw that mirage ever forgive him for not transforming the wonderful vision into reality here and now?

He tried to let them down gently in advance.

He confessed he wasn't really Santa Claus, as he put it, and so his government couldn't usher in an instant era of gift-giving. "You can only squeeze so much juice from the lemon," he said his first post-election press conference, and the day before Parliament opened, he repeated: it was impossible for the government to give more to the taxpayers than the taxpayers gave to the government.

When he has cleaned up all the left-over chores he inherited from former Prime Minister Pearson's five years of misgovernment, he could begin on his Just Society.

But meanwhile, if the Trudeauanites were disillusioned with his throne speech, Trudeau himself has no illusions about his failure to enchant.

The other night, accepting a membership in the National Press Club, he grinned and shrugged and spoke off the top of his head, cracking: "I'm doing this without a written speech — it couldn't be any worse."

Washington Calling

Foreign Aid in Jeopardy

By MARQUEE CHILDS

AROUND the walls of the conference room of the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee are the photographs of the committee chairmen back across the years. These men were the focus of power in America's dealings with the rest of the world, the lines of their authority running back to state, district, township, to the furthest of the creek in a simpler time.

Something is happening to the lines of communication today. Even in the quiet of the conference room with its big green baize table there is audible the distant rumbling of a political earthquake threatening to shatter them entirely.

Call it a new isolationism or, in the language of George C. Wallace, just fed up with all those foreigners who never help us, the very base of American foreign policy in the post-war years is in jeopardy. The name of the game covering a broad range of action has been foreign aid. The premise was that the rich nations, with the United States the richest of all, were duty-bound to share a part of their wealth through loans and grants for the new developing nations. Without such sharing, the rich nations on the small island of affluence in Western Europe and the United States and Canada will be overwhelmed by violence and disorder among three-fourths of the world's people living in hopeless poverty.

One of the means for sharing the wealth is the International Development Association, an affiliate of the World Bank created to make soft loans for struggling new nations. IDA makes loans for 50 years without interest with no repayment required for the first 10 years. The United States contributed with the other have-nations to provide $400,000,000 — $160,000,000 a year for three years — for IDA.

But now poor IDA is in grave trouble. Members of the Foreign Relations Committee who formerly pledged their support are opposed or uncertain. It seems impossible to get a quorum so that a vote can be taken to move the authorization onto the Senate floor.

The future, if IDA ever reaches the floor, is dark and dubious. Conscientious senators who in the past have supported the overall policy grumble about how tight money and hard loans stand in the way of development programs here in the United States. Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee talked in a lengthy committee session of how a high school in his home town could not get funds to put in a proper sewerage line so that a playing field would not be a health hazard, and yet here we are proposing to make money available for countries around the world without any interest charge and no payments for 10 years.

The proposed capital for the new Asian Bank is in trouble. The House Appropriations Committee has just cut President Johnson's requested $2.9 billion for foreign aid nearly in half. Whacking at every phase of the program, the committee cut the requested technical and operation loans for South American nations from $625,000,000 to $365,000,000.

While all this goes on, with the Foreign Relations Committee staff trying hard to keep the train on the tracks, the chairman is in his native Arkansas fighting for survival. Sen. J. William Fulbright faces a challenge to his authority by his views on foreign policy as the anti-communist prejudices run — that is part of the earthquake threatening the established political structure.

Charles Bernard, Fulbright's Republican opponent, a wealthy planter-businessman, charges him with being "soft on communism." He wants to recognize Red China. He gives aid and comfort to the enemy in Vietnam. He is for trade relations with the Communist countries in Eastern Europe. That is the indictment contained in a 300,000 mailing out of state appealing for funds. A similar mailing of 275,000 is shortly to go within Arkansas.

There is evidence that this is part of a nationally organized movement to reverse American policy in favor of a hard-line anti-Communist isolationism. H. L. Hunt, the well-advertised Texas billionaire, boasting that he replaced moderate Sen. Thomas Kuchel with flaming hard-line Max Baucus in California's Republican primary, says he will do the same thing with Fulbright.

Hunt is out for Wallace. While his claims of big-money contributions rarely match the reports of candidates' finance chairmen, in his repugnant fashion he stimulates other oil-rich contributors. The paradox in Arkansas in this strange of political years is that apparently many voters for Wallace will also vote for Fulbright — bumper stickers link the two names.

Currently 12 nations are receiving foreign aid, a few such as India and Pakistan large amounts, the rest dribbles. Serious observers believe that part of the disillusion and frustration may grow from the fact that the program has never been revised and reappraised. It has grown like a spreading banyan tree throwing down roots here, there and everywhere.

Russia Creeps Up

China Lags in Nuclear Race

By ANDREW WILSON

From London

CHINA has fallen behind in her nuclear weapons program. No nuclear tests have been announced by the official New China News Agency in 1968, and it is possible that the test of December 1967 was a partial failure.

There is now evidence, according to the Institute for Strategic Studies in its annual Military Balance published Sept. 13, that this is due to the internal political struggle in China. The institute points out that the major nuclear test site is in Sinkiang, one of the outlying provinces where the political situation has been particularly confused.

Another development noted in the Military Balance is Russia's continued buildup of its strategic missile force. The number of land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles is approaching the American total of 1,054. But although Soviet warheads tend to be of greater megatonnage than American ones, the Russians have only a small number of solid-fuel types which can be launched more quickly.

In submarine-launched ballistic missiles the United States has a substantial superiority, with about 650 missiles against Russia's 125. But a new class of nuclear-powered missile submarine, similar to America's Polaris type, is now entering service with the Soviet navy.

The Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, says the institute, has shown the paces of Soviet airborne troops. These, and new marine forces, play an important part in a new Soviet policy of "flexible response" similar to that adopted by NATO.

The use of the big Antonov-22 transport for the landing not only of troops but also of tactical and anti-aircraft missiles has been demonstrated in Warsaw Pact manoeuvres. The Soviet naval force in the Mediterranean sea for the first

Far in the Lead

California's Upsurge

By NEIL MORGAN from Los Angeles

SOMETIME early in 1969, if current projections hold up, California will become the first state with 20 million residents. Like so much of the state's history, the moment will seem more akin to melodrama than to fact. It will have been exactly 200 years since the Franciscan priest Junipero Serra established the first white settlement in California.

Migration to California has begun to level off, but it continues to be far greater than that to any other state. Demographers predict another four million people will have migrated to California by 1975, and personal income will have soared to $110 billion, almost double the current figure.

Both Californians and people of other states have grown blasé about the economic upsurge along this Pacific Coast. Monthly business gains pyramid with monotonous regularity despite the direst forecasts of doom from many quarters.

The greatest economic growth in the United States in the years until 1975 is almost unanimously projected for the Far West and Southwest, with California in the lead.

In 1968, the California economy has been outpacing the U.S. national growth rate substantially in every measurable way. It is more than double the national rate in population growth, triple in employment growth, 5 to 6 per cent above in growth of personal income, and double the national rate of growth in housing construction.

More than half of California's 6.5 million families have incomes in excess of $10,000, well over the national average and substantially above that of the second state, New York.

About 10 per cent more people live in California now than in the state of New York. They earn 15 per cent more and spend 21 per cent more than the New Yorkers. Unemployment in California is at an eight-year low with 7.5 million Californians holding jobs.

Now the scope of the California economy is commonly described by relating it to that of nations, and California ranks as the sixth nation of the world. Last year the California "gross product" amounted to more than $88 billion, a total exceeded only by that of the United States, Russia, West Germany, France and Japan.

It was 8 per cent greater than the gross national product of Britain. By 1975, the California figure is expected to reach $138 billion, and by 1980, $182 billion. The per capita income of California exceeds that of any country, including the United States.

An East Coast manufacturer recently led a research team to California and admitted that such statistics had led his firm to reappraise the state.

"We had a division office and subsidiary for Colombia and a couple of other countries," he said. "We kept thinking of California merely as a state. We treated it as a mere segment of the United States when, in fact, it represented more business and more potential than a dozen Colombias. So we regrouped and organized our structure as though California were a separate nation."

Others have responded similarly. In 1965, the publishers of the Kiplinger newsletter dispatched investigators to California. Such a bullish report resulted that a full issue of the newsletter was devoted to the state and a new all-California newsletter was added to the service.

At about the same time the California State Chamber of Commerce adopted the slogan: "Nothing we have done in the past will ever be good enough again."

Yet for most of its history, California has been scoffed at as an outpost of almost colonial nature. Its economy was widely presumed to be shaky, based on weather, and prone to instant collapse. In the 1930s, it was traditional in some Eastern circles to warn a California migrant against taking with him anything that he couldn't handily bring back on the old Super Chief.

Somewhat California has continued to evade economic disaster. Now the strange ways of California business are being copied and adapted around the world. Success is the ultimate argument. The willingness of the Californian to experiment is a magnet.

"Whenever we have had anything new to try out," a New York businessman recently told a Los Angeles audience, "I have always asked our people to send it out here because I knew you would try it. I knew that you would not think of all the reasons that old established communities can think of why it wouldn't be successful, but that you would take it and say: 'Let's try it.' After you have tried it and made a success of it then the old established cities accept it."

The innovative capacity of the Californian is only part of his success formula. Despite pockets of poverty, the overriding impressions in California are of prosperity and abundance. The product of that, George Harris has called "the first mass aristocracy" now has solid roots in a proliferating economy that is not going to blow away, but instead continues to establish a bewildering array of superlatives.

Now California is importing less and less of its working capital. As income levels rise and prosperous migrants bring their savings to the state, financial institutions of Los Angeles and other California cities grow stronger and provide a larger proportion of expansion capital. Aggressive savings and loan associations attract capital at a record rate. Californians have a growth rich enough to become a popular of minor capitalists. They have astonishing rates of participation in stock and mutual fund ownership. In real estate ventures and in investment syndicates, one-fifth of all U.S. mutual funds shares are held by Californians, and private investment club meetings have become a standard feature of many housewives' schedules.

The unconventional approach of California's business and financial leaders have violated the traditions of the older American establishment. But now the world watches and listens.

Military State Emerges

It's Official—Army Rules China

By ROBERT ELEGANT from Hong Kong

The Chinese People's Liberation Army is casting off the gossamer veil of submission to civilian control and showing itself openly as the true ruling force in a splintered China.

China virtually has become a military state, despite widespread dissension within the ranks of the Liberation Army. An avowed military junta is prevented chiefly by the necessity to use the prestige of Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung as a unifying factor and by intimate relations between civilian and military leaders in the provinces of the vast nation.

The symbol of Mao is, however, used to nullify his power and to negate totally the purpose of the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution — which was the creation of a new society.

Justifying themselves always by reference to the sacred words of Chairman Mao, the generals have reversed his dictum: "The Party must control the gun." Instead, the gun now openly controls the Communist Party — and seeks to rebuild that shattered organization into an effective instrument of authority.

While Workers Propaganda Teams supported by armed soldiers invade schools, factories, farms, and public offices to "drive out" Maoist leaders, the official journal of the military, The Liberation Army Daily, has just publicly issued direct instructions to the party in particular and to China's resurgent old-line administrators in general.

The army daily's editorial marked the formal turning point of the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution. It strongly confirmed the already obvious fact of military rule in China.

The military stressed repeatedly that China's chief need was "unification" of feuding elements and regions — and warned that the army would take strong measures to put down dissident factions all claiming to be "the true Maoists."

Actually, the military already has taken the strongest punitive action against Maoists who refuse to obey their orders.

At the Kiangsi medical college, the Workers Propaganda Teams initially met strong opposition. But Nanchang Radio, the official organ of the province's military-controlled and conservative revolutionary committee, declared that the teams soon brought matters under control by "dragging out evil elements."

Stressing "organizational work" as opposed to the disorganized rampages of the Maoists, the army daily's editorial directly attacked Red Guards for the sin of "mountain-topism." That peculiar term means persistence in one's own struggle for power in the teeth of the bayonets. Declaring that "95 per cent of the masses and the cadres of the party and government" must be united, the military jettisoned the concept of perpetual struggle which was the driving force of the cultural revolution.

The military enjoined "thorough-going self-criticism" on all disobedient elements. In an obvious reference to Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, and her ultra-left clique, now rendered virtually powerless, the journal declared: "Certain people believe they are immune to self-criticism because of their previous contributions to the revolution... no true revolutionary can behave in such a manner."

While the military ritually quoted Mao and his "deputy leader," vice chairman of the communist party and defense minister Lin Biao, to justify its anti-Maoist actions, the worker-soldier teams moved hard to suppress the Maoists.

Will Vanished Mystery Man Pop Jauntily from Jungle?

By WILLIAM HUGHES from Bangkok

Eighteen months after the strange disappearance in the Malaysian jungles of the legendary Jim Thompson, an American millionaire and U.S. wartime intelligence agent in Southeast Asia, a bitter legal battle is shaping up for possession of his priceless collection of Asian art treasures in Bangkok.

James H. W. Thompson, 61, vanished on a half-hour ramble within a mile of a friends' bungalow at a tourist resort in the Cameron Highlands in Central Malaya.

Experienced jungle trackers, on the spot inside five hours, and secret inquiries later by CIA representatives, uncovered no trace of him. His disappearance still remains a mystery.

Bangkok became Thompson's adopted home after the war. He founded the Thai silk industry and, over 15 years, assembled in his palatial residence the world's finest private collection of Asian art — Buddhist tapestries, scrolls and parchments, Khmer carvings, statuary and relics, Chinese paintings and porcelain, jade and jewellery.

Thompson's first will bequeathed his collection to the Siam Society, an association of distinguished Thais, and wealthy resident foreigners, because he did not want his treasures to leave Thailand.

second will, naming a nephew on Wall Street as his executor with instructions to establish a separate Thai-Western foundation in Bangkok that would preserve his art collection and national museum in Thailand.

But that will has not so far come to light. If it is not recovered, possession of the Thompson treasure reverts technically to the Siam Society.

Two months ago the president of the Siam Society, Prince Achavadi, visited Thompson's New York nephew — Harry B. Thompson III — and they agreed informally that the nephew should remain executor of the second, lost will but pledge that the Siam Society should be represented in the new foundation.

But now an impatient minority of the Siam Society has filed an application in the Bangkok courts demanding possession of the art collection under the terms of the first will. The complex processes of Thai law guarantee a protracted struggle but, in the still inexplicable absence of his body, Thompson's presumed death cannot be legally established until 1974.

And there are still faithful friends of Jim Thompson who insist that the vanished mystery man will some day emerge jauntily from the jungle shadows.

Papa Doc's Sick, Confused, Scared

By CAL McCRYSTAL from Port-au-Prince

Dr. Francois Duvalier, president for life and spiritual leader of Haiti, whose brutal dictatorship has produced economic ruin and a decade of terror for his people, is a confused, sick and badly scared man. His regime, exactly 11 years old Sept. 21, is crumbling rapidly to an inglorious end.

To some Haitians, Papa Doc Duvalier is immortal; to others, he is just what he looks to be — one of the walking dead. His survival of life-long diabetes, a heart attack, several assassination attempts and eight armed invasions has been attributed to the spirit gods of voodoo of which he is a tireless practitioner. Voodoo is one of Duvalier's favorite political weapons and has served him well in the past (often it is said, Papa Doc would seek inspiration and guidance by studying goats' entrails, or by sitting for days in his bath, wearing only a top hat).

Recent events indicate that the spirit gods may be deserting the vast white palace in Port-au-Prince. It was reported this week that Duvalier fears he has cancer of the rectum. When I interviewed Duvalier last month he seemed a lot older than his 61 years. His voice rose hardly above a whisper and he walked, stooped and unsteadily with obvious difficulty. He was witnessing at the time the disintegration of his proudest work — the incredible "spy" trial, staged triumphantly for the world.

David John Knox, a Briton who worked for the Bahamas government, information officer, was arrested and tried before a Haitian military tribunal on charges of spying in connection with an abortive May 20 invasion by exiled Haitians. Despite the farcical conduct of the trial and a painful lack of evidence, Knox was sentenced to death but was then deported without comment by Duvalier.

Among the men arrested were Oswald Brandt, a 76-year-old millionaire Jamaican born of British parents, who owns factories in Haiti and is Jamaican consul in Port-au-Prince and his nephew, Clifford Brandt, 52.

Duvalier's handling of these prisoners in an intriguing tale, characteristic of the Papa Doc method. Some of the Haitians who tried to bomb the presidential palace on May 30 were caught and sentenced to death after confessing their guilt. Duvalier reduced the sentences to life imprisonment after one of them allegedly said it was rumored that the Brandts gave $150,000 to finance the invasion. The Brandts were arrested on this dubious testimony alone and held without charge.

According to a member of the Brandt family who lives in Europe, "loans" to Duvalier by Oswald Brandt have topped $3,000,000. And the source goes on: This may be a fraction of what has been "contributed" by other foreign businessmen in Haiti.

Clearly, however, Papa Doc's regime cannot survive on further "donations" from businessmen. Ever since the United States stopped the annual $10,000,000 aid in 1963, on the grounds of graft and waste, Duvalier has grown progressively poorer and alternative sources of revenue — the foreign businessmen — are drying up fast.

"Donations" are usually solicited in a direct way: Papa Doc's agents simply call on businessmen and ask them to contribute to government projects ranging from road-building to carnivals — projects which sometimes never materialize. If this failed other means were tried.

Last October, for example, the Royal Bank of Canada in Port-au-Prince was asked for a $67,000 loan, and refused. A couple of nights later, however, the bank was broken into and exactly $67,000 was found to be missing. Police investigators into the theft became rather half-hearted when the trail of clues appeared to be heading un- comfortably towards the palace grounds.

The men who perform the money-raising chores and also act as a buffer between Duvalier and the army are the 20,000-strong Tonton Macoute, a murderous bunch of nationalized hoodlums. Now Papa Doc can no longer afford to pay Tonton Macoute wages.

Duvalier hopes to hold the Tonton Macoute together by stressing the threats (both real and imaginary) of invasion but each time he does this he destroys his one remaining source of substantial revenue — a revival of Haitian tourism. This is one part of Duvalier's dilemma.

The other part is dangerously obvious: Whether Papa Doc's body or nerve finally fails him in the coming months or not, it is a fact that thousands of Haitians in exile have become increasingly active politically since they "spy trial" in August. Most of them, convinced they can eventually oust Duvalier, are in the Bahamas and the United States.

Insomniacs Spawn World's Troubles

Sleep It Off—Save World

By DENNIS BRAITHWAITE from Ottawa

Before we all throw in our lot with the new behavioral psychiatrists — those are the ones who cure mental illness with the same techniques used to teach pigeons to bow — I would like to put a word in on behalf of my favorite therapy. I am emboldened to do so by the same self-confidence and lack of clinical proof shown by the behaviorists in disposing of the principles of Freud. Psychoanalysis is a flop says James V. McConnell in Esquire, because of its failure to cure anybody.

Controlled experiments prove that untrained ward aides achieve better results with disturbed patients than fully qualified and experienced psychoanalysts.

McConnell then gives a number of examples of "cures" effected through behavioral methods in which the symptoms are gotten rid of through a system of rewards and punishments. Once you have cured the symptoms, you have cured the disease.

It isn't necessary, the behaviorists maintain, to dredge into a person's unconscious to find out what caused the mental upset; knowledge of its source never cured a neurosis. One of his case histories is that of a woman obsessed with the idea that the Chinese Reds were out to get her. She babbled away on this theme all day, and could not be reached by the ordinary tools of psychiatry. Finally, one of the behaviorist boys got her to wear a pair of earphones and whenever she mentioned China he blasted a peeringly unpleasant sound through to her.

Result: She very quickly stopped mentioning the subject, and was therefore cured. Very neat, but how did he get her to wear the earphones? By force, probably; in fact, McConnell admits that restraint, even cruelty, has to be used to make the system work. But, he says in mitigation, better a few hours of cruelty and pain than a lifetime in the asylum. Very neat again.

But if the persuasive theories of Dr. Freud can be set aside as worthless after more than a half a century of belief by one and all, what hope has the new behavioral psychiatry to last longer than the current issue of Esquire? Obviously, it's a flash in the pan; therefore I offer my own panacea — sleep therapy. Yes, yes, sleep. Sleep that "knits up the ravelled sleeve of care," that is "sore labor's bath, balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course, chief nourisher in life's feast," as every schoolboy knows. That same boy also knows that a problem that seems insoluble will simply fall away if you "sleep on it."

All the world's trouble is born in the minds of insomniacs. All the bad poetry, useless music and fallacious theories are conceived by men who should be sleeping. On the other hand, dreams, the principal by-product of slumber, are always creative and can often go right to the printer with scarcely any re-writing at all.

Babies cry because they want to sleep, but can't. This keeps the mother awake, which keeps the father awake, forming a pattern which if not broken can destroy the marriage. The irritation and anxiety produced by sleeplessness are identical to the symptoms of mental disorder. That's because they are the symptoms of mental disorder, the disorientation caused by lack of needed sleep.

How much is needed? A lot; a lot more, anyhow, than we're getting. Dogs sleep virtually round the clock. Have you ever seen a dog in a mental hospital? Why should man, the most complicated of organisms, the one with most problems and responsibilities, be anything less than dominant over the world and all its creatures — think he can get by with a few hours sleep out of 24? Obviously he can't, as the terribly state of the world under his dominion so glaringly proves.

Peace River Power Flows

Switch On Saturday

HUDSON'S HOPE, B.C. (CP) — The hydro system of British Columbia will receive a boost of 1,000,000 horsepower this weekend, when the first electricity from a power project planned 12 years ago flows from this remote northern town to Vancouver.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett is to pull a switch Saturday afternoon while standing some 500 feet underground, activating three 27,000-kilowatt generators at the Peace River power project.

Water from a 650-square-mile lake, B.C.'s biggest, will surge through the W. A. C. Bennett dam and drop 315 feet down inclined chutes to spin three 310,000-horsepower turbines, providing the power that will be generated into electricity.

Its work done, the water will flow out through manifolds and back into the Peace River, getting under way on its 2,500-mile run east into Alberta and north to the Arctic Ocean.

Ultimate generating capacity of the dam, at Portage Mountain 12 miles west of here and 600 miles northeast of Vancouver, will be 2,300,000 kilowatts, or more than 3,000,000 horsepower, with 10 generators churning out electricity. This is roughly equal to the total capacity of the entire existing B.C. hydro system.

The fourth and fifth generators are scheduled to be activated next year, another in 1971, two in 1972 and the final two in 1973.

A 500,000-volt overhead transmission line will deliver the power to the lower mainland area, with branch lines serving other parts of the province. Cost to consumers in the Vancouver area will be the same as they pay now, about 4.4 mills per kilowatt hour—or approximately 4.4 cents to operate all burners of a household electric range for one hour.

Planning for the Peace River project began in 1956, although construction didn't get under way until 1964, after the provincial Social Credit government took over two separate private companies—B.C. Electric Co. and Peace River Power Development Co.—and formed the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority by merging them with the government-owned B.C. Power Commission.

The project mapped out originally by Peace River Power was turned over to the Crown corporation and thousands of workmen soon were pouring into the area in search of pay cheques that often ran as high as $1,500 a month for laborers.

The work force hit a peak of 4,550 men in the summer of 1967, when the 600-foot-high Bennett dam was nearing completion.

Cost of the project to date is $485,000,000 with the ultimate cost estimated at $725,000,000, including the transmission lines and interest on numerous bond issues floated to finance the job. By comparison, the 11-generator, 5,200,000-kilowatt Churchill Falls hydroelectric project in Labrador, scheduled for completion in 1976, is expected to cost $255,000,000.

Although the 670-foot-long Portage Mountain generating station, carved out of bedrock deep below the Bennett dam, will be open to the public Saturday for the first time, thousands of visitors watched progress of the dam itself from the first dumping in 1964 of what eventually totalled 100,000,000 tons of glacial earthfill, to its completion and dedication a year ago.

CONVEYOR BELT

The biggest conveyor belt in the world carried the fill three miles to a sorting station near the dam site.

Enough fill went into the dam to build a wall 12 feet high and nine feet thick from Vancouver to Halifax.

B.C. Hydro estimates that 2,000 visitors will watch Saturday's switch-on ceremony, including 200 who will be flown here from Vancouver in three chartered planes.

Former British colonies in Southeast Asia, now independent nations, need aid and trade, and to get them, they must speak English, members of the Victoria branch of the English Speaking Union were told Tuesday.

Former ambassador to Thailand and Burma, B. C. Butler, now a resident of Victoria, said that for the first time many of these countries found that they had to deal with the outside world. They were finding that English was a necessity.

When dealing with the Asian Development Bank, the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, the NATO of the east, and with the Colombo Plan, they found English valuable.

Most of the nations, Indonesia, Burma and Thailand, had administrators who were strong in English although in Malaysia the state language was Malay.

Because Malay was just not adapted to the modern world it was necessary to incorporate 65,000 words into the language in 1967, Mr. Butler said, and still it was unable to cope with situations heretofore unknown in the country.

“There is a strong demand for teachers to instruct in English all through Southeast Asia,” Mr. Butler said.

“However, we should be certain that the portions of our culture that these people must of necessity absorb with English, doesn't debase them.”

Mr. Butler traced the historical background of British domination in Southeast Asia dating back to Sir Francis Drake in 1580.

Ford's Price Increase Smallest of Big Three

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. Wednesday followed the lead of General Motors in announcing automobile price increases on new models below the 2.9-per-cent boost posted by Chrysler Corp. The Chrysler increase was criticized by President Johnson.

Ford said the average increase in the list price of its 1969 models was 47 or 1.6 per cent. GM announced Monday an average list price increase of 1.6 per cent or $49 a car.

The list price does not include federal excise tax or dealer's handling charges.

Like GM and Chrysler, Ford did not include the price of headrests in its new price list. The headrests will become mandatory equipment on all cars sold in the United States Jan. 1, 1969.

DETROIT (AP)—Ford Motor Co. said Wednesday it is asking owners of some 1969 Econoline vehicles in the United States, Canada and overseas to return them to Ford dealerships for inspection of front brake hoses which may have been installed improperly.

The company said some hoses apparently were installed improperly between April 10 and Aug. 15, and 41,850 vehicles are being recalled.

Ford said about 2,000 vehicles may require replacement of hoses if a front spring has been in contact with them.

Eventually a moving spring coil could rub on improperly installed hose sufficiently to cause malfunction of the front brakes of the dual braking system, the company explained.

Affected by the callback are 37,750 Econoline units in the U.S., 3,650 in Canada and 450 in overseas markets.

Shelford Seeks Controls

Synthetic Foods Target

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's agriculture minister Tuesday called for a national policy to control sale of synthetic foods.

“We should put health ahead of the almighty dollar and the money that can be made from synthetic foods,” Cyril Shelford said.

He said synthetic milk, made from vegetable oils and sold in the U.S., does not have the food value of milk. The problem was one for health departments as well as agriculture ministers.

“The minister said a national policy is needed because some provinces with small dairy industries might allow sales of synthetic milk. Then it would be a matter of time before all relaxed regulations.”

In Education

Human Values Pressed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Technical and scientific specialization should only take up half the blackboard space in our schools, British Columbia's minister of lands, forests and water resources said Wednesday.

Ray Williston told the 18th B.C. Natural Sources conference that educationists and employers are beginning to realize that education must be balanced between the sciences and the humanities.

“He said that ‘we are gaining a fuller understanding of how to fit our lives and our natural environment together.’

“Less of our thought is being devoted to the pursuit of material gain alone.”

He said the government recognizes this change in trends. It knows that public needs are not satisfied solely with material wealth if, in gaining this wealth, there is a disproportionate loss of aesthetic values—values more pleasurable and more easily obtainable with increasing leisure time.

Predicting that by 1984 ‘our society will have changed in many ways,’ he said recreation will have gained much greater status, particularly in the winter sports field.

Ottawa Pound Support

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's share of the $2 billion in standby support pledged for the pound sterling was disclosed officially Wednesday as $107,343,750.

The figure appeared in revised federal spending estimates tabled in the Commons.

At this stage the figure represents only a bookkeeping transaction. It is the amount that may potentially be called for use to maintain the pound at its pegged value.

The estimates also provide for contributions totalling $81,081,000 to the International Development Association, the institution of the World Bank group that makes “soft” or low-interest loans to less-developed countries.

The ISB has all but exhausted funds originally pledged to it by major aid-giving nations. Canada's share of a new three-year, $400,000,000 replenishment is $25,000,000 a year.

Moscow's First Carrier Threat in Mediterranean

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States chief of naval operations says the Soviet Union's first aircraft carrier, now operating in the Mediterranean, has the ability to land marine-type units ashore in the Middle East.

Admiral Thomas H. Moorer said in an interview that the new ship Moskva "is visible evidence of Russia's announced intention to become a modern major offensive sea power."

Moorer

The 650-foot Moskva, a helicopter carrier, arrived in the Mediterranean last week and is escorted by two destroyers.

Her appearance may have been designed to show new Soviet support for Egypt in a time of new tensions with Israel.

U.S. Navy men said, however, the Moskva in no way compares with the big American attack carriers in the Mediterranean. The 23,000- to 25,000-ton Soviet ship is neither designed for nor does she carry jet fighter planes, but U.S. intelligence estimates the Moskva can carry as many as three dozen helicopters which could rapidly send troops ashore to the aid of an ally.

U.S. carriers, by contrast, range up to 85,000 tons and carry squadrons of supersonic fighters, bombers and assorted support aircraft.

The Moskva has a new sister ship being prepared for service, which may mean the Soviet Union plans to rotate the two vessels to the Mediterranean station.

The Soviet union only began regular naval operations in the Mediterranean in 1954 but she suddenly quadrupled her fleet in the area after last year's Middle East war.

The Russians now operate around 40 military vessels in that sea compared with the 55 to 60 ships of the U.S. 6th Fleet.

Said Moorer: "I think the real significance of the Moskva's deployment is not so much in the fact that she gives the Soviet navy a new capability, but rather that she is a manifestation of the continuing effort on the part of the Soviets to deploy a modern force into all of the oceans of the world."

"Her presence on the open seas clearly demonstrates Russia's technological ability and sophistication as well as her intention of broadening the Soviet capability."

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The 125-nation General Assembly elected Canada as one of its 17 vice-presidents Wednesday as the task of organizing the work of the 23rd assembly was launched in earnest.

The vice-presidents play a significant role in guiding the day-by-day deliberations of the world body.

They are part of 25-member general or steering committee which studies all proposed agenda items, makes recommendations for their inclusion or rejection, charts the priority of items and their allocation to committees, and recommends a closing date for the assembly.

The other vice-presidents, elected according to a geographical pattern, are Iran, Lebanon, Togo, Uganda, the Philippines, Guinea, Mauritania, Bulgaria, Peru, Guyana, Sweden, and the five permanent members of the Security Council. The permanent members are France, Britain, the Soviet Union, the United States and Nationalist China.

The senior delegate on hand normally represents his country in vice-presidential duties. Canada last held an assembly vice-presidency during the 15th session, 1960-61, and the ensuing special session in August, 1961. The general committee's members, in addition to the 17 vice-presidents, are the assembly's president, Foreign Minister Emilio Arenales Catalan of Guatemala, and the chairmen of the seven main committees.

These committee chairmen, elected Wednesday morning by acclamation, are:

Political and security first committee — Piero Vinci, Italy. Special political committee — Abdul Rabbim, Abby Farah, Somalia.

Economic and financial second committee — Richard Mawdsell, Ghana.

territories fourth committee — Patrick V. J. Solomon, Trinidad and Tobago.

Legal sixth committee — K. Krishan Rao, India.

In one of its first decisions, the general committee Wednesday afternoon recommended Friday, Dec. 20, as the target date for ending the session.

As in UN practice, preliminary negotiations were held to determine which countries would be elected to the assembly vice-presidencies, assigned by regional and political groupings. In its section—Western European and other states—Canada received 114 votes and Sweden, the other agreed-upon selection, 115. The vote was cast for Finland.

The voting for five vice-presidents from the permanent members of the Security Council — which only has five such members — reflected the opposition of many countries to Nationalist China's continued membership and the annual attempt to replace the Formosa regime with mainland China representatives.

With 117 valid ballots, France received 117 votes, Britain 112, the Soviet Union 112, the United States 109 and Nationalist China 79.

No-Cuts Stand

NATO Review Bonn Demand

BONN (AP) — West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger says NATO must review its troop strength in Europe and abandon the idea of any one-sided cuts if Soviet forces persist in their occupation of Czechoslovakia.

The occupation by some 20 Soviet divisions, "a large part of them close to our frontier," has put NATO at a disadvantage militarily, Kiesinger said Wednesday in a policy address on the reopening of West Germany's Parliament after its summer recess.

"These Soviet troops are in a high degree of readiness which enables them to act with extraordinary speed," he added.

TWO MONTHS

Consequences of the invasion will be discussed by NATO ministers in a series of meetings during the next two months.

Defence ministry sources in London said Britain is urging its allies to call off planned cuts in their forces in Europe.

Canada, Belgium and even West Germany have been considering reductions in the lineup, from which the United States has pulled 35,000 Americans this year. British officials want European members to rely more on themselves.

JAM VIEW

Not all intelligence men share Kiesinger's view that the occupation has put NATO in a jam. British experts said they expect the Soviet Union to leave as many as six divisions in Czechoslovakia along the West German border, but that this is offset by questionable loyalty of the Czechoslovak army. In the British view, the balance of power between NATO and the Communist Warsaw Pact countries thus will remain unchanged.

Some British officials were said to feel that NATO should warn the Soviet Union against any military move against other European countries—such as Yugoslavia, Austria and Finland—and remain strong enough to make the warning believable.

MAJOR MENACE

The Kremlin has long ranked West Germany as a major menace to the Communist East. In a recent declaration that the Western powers rejected, the Russians claimed they had the right to use force to combat what they called neo-Nazism and militarist-revanchism among the West Germans. They have denounced West German efforts to improve relations with Eastern European countries as a plot to disrupt Socialist unity. Kiesinger accused the Soviet Union of trying to drive a wedge between the United States and Europe.

NUCLEAR BALANCE

"While the nuclear balance has diminished the threat of an all-out nuclear war, it also has the effect that a conventional attack by a potential enemy seems no longer impossible."

The chancellor sounded a new call for efforts to unite Western Europe, a project which has never aroused enthusiasm from President de Gaulle of France.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Q.

What majority percentage is required for the vote to pass?

A.

A majority of 60 per cent of the votes cast is required before the sewer enterprise By-Law can become law. It should be clearly understood that it is 60 per cent of the votes cast, not 60 per cent of the eligible voters. With this in mind Saanich Council, which has unanimously endorsed the By-Law, urges every property-owner in Saanich to exercise his franchise on September 28. Council is looking for a clear-cut decision and is hoping that it will be for progress.

NATO Admiral Observes

Soviets Challenge on Sea

LONDON (CP) — The Soviet chief of staff to NATO's Atlantic forces, said in a press conference assessment of NATO's current exercise Silver Tower on the Atlantic.

"The challenge is that they are at sea considerably more than in the past," U.S. Rear Admiral M. G. Bayne, deputy brought about an "element of danger," though he observed the U.S.S.R. of deliberate harassment of the allied force.

"Their presence certainly adds a touch of realism to the exercise," he said.

Bayne conceded this would be dangerous, although he had not seen such reports at his office in Norfolk, Va.

The admiral estimated an average of three or four Soviet planes a day visited the fleet on long-range reconnaissance from bases in northern Russia. British Commodore R. A. Gilchrist said two or three Soviet submarines were believed to be tracking the armada in its long sweep across the Eastern Atlantic and Norwegian Sea that ends Friday.

Current NATO estimates are that about 18 Soviet surface ships also have been trailing the convoy closely.

In any case, he said, the exercise that started Sept. 19 has been an unequalled success and the big striking fleet going to the rescue of Norway against pressure from a supposed aggressor has not been deterred from accomplishing its assigned tasks.

Supplies Nearer Biafrans

OTTAWA (CP) — Aid from Canada and other countries destined for starving Biafrans is gradually getting closer to its destination as the Nigerian army advances. External Affairs Minister Sharp said Wednesday.

R. G. L. Fairweather (PC-Fundy-Royal) asked in the Commons for clarification of a statement by a Nigerian army commander that no aid shipments would be allowed to pass.

Sharp said he had investigated and was told this statement was made a month ago. More recently International Red Cross and Nigerian officials had said the military is "moving supplies forward behind their advancing army."

Sharp hoped all countries would co-operate to expedite movement of supplies to the needy.

Allied Forces Hang Tough

Red Trawler Hangs On

HALIFAX (CP) — The West-voyn flagship Towle, a United States Navy transport, was completed Wednesday when a 10-ship convoy arrived at New London, Conn.

The convoy of merchant ships, which originated here Sunday, was unofficially joined by a Russian trawler.

A spokesman for the Maritime Command here said the trawler approached the convoy shortly before noon Monday and at one point was less than a quarter-mile astern of the con-voyn flagship Towle, a United States Navy transport. The trawler fell away from the convoy some time before it reached New London for disembarkment to end that aspect of the exercise.

The convoy was under constant simulated air and submarine attack during the exercise by opposition forces comprised of one Canadian and two U.S. submarines and attack aircraft from the U.S. Navy and Massachusetts air national guard.

Meanwhile, the NATO fleet in the Eastern Atlantic answered NATO council.

Dutch Scholar Faces Vatican Heresy Trial

ROME (UPI)—The Vatican is preparing a heresy trial against a Dutch theologian who was one of the leading liberal influences at the Vatican Ecumenical Council, Roman Catholic circles in Rome said Wednesday.

They said Prof. E. C. Schillebeeckx, Belgian-born theological adviser to Dutch Catholic bishops, is expected to come to Rome in October to defend himself before the powerful and conservative Vatican congregation of the faith, the former Holy Office.

The sources said the Congregation, long in disagreement with Schillebeeckx, brought charges against him after he refused to endorse Pope Paul's recent encyclical on birth control.

There was no comment from the Vatican on the report of the charges against Schillebeeckx, which first appeared Tuesday in a French newspaper.

In Nijmegen, Holland, where he is a professor of dogmatic theology at the Catholic University, Schillebeeckx was quoted in a television interview as saying he knew "unofficially" of the charges against him.

Liberal Catholic circles in Rome said Msgr. Angelo Felici, the apostolic pro-nuncio in Holland, recently went to Schillebeeckx and informed him of a considerable amount of evidence against him had been assembled.

Felici told him, however, that no charges would be brought if he endorsed the pope's encyclical on birth control, the sources said. They said Schillebeeckx, after studying the encyclical, declined to back it.

Schillebeeckx long has been at odds with Cardinal Alfredo Ottaviani, the dominant conservative influence in the Ecumenical Council and the former head of the Congregation.

Ottaviani retired last January and was replaced by a liberal, Cardinal Fraga Sese of Yugoslavia. But Catholic circles said Ottaviani continues to maintain an office at the Congregation and to wield great authority there.

Schillebeeckx is one of the authors of the controversial Dutch catholicism for adults, a best-selling book in some countries which has so far failed to gain Vatican approval.

He also was the author of a famous liberal document of the Dutch episcopate, The Directions of the Council, which was issued in 1961 and later banned from Italian bookstores.

Schillebeeckx wrote a critical study of priestly celibacy shortly before Pope Paul issued an encyclical last year reaffirming the celibacy principle.

Paris Negotiators:

UN Involvement Out of Question

PARIS (Reuters) — The United States and North Vietnam made no progress Wednesday in their preliminary peace negotiations, but appeared determined to go on talking.

Both sides brushed off the possibility of getting the United Nations involved in the talks which began four months ago.

At the 23rd session of the talks Wednesday, chief U.S. delegate W. Averell Harriman said Hanoi should "face reality" and accept the existence of a separate South Vietnam.

But he added that the U.S. has no objection to reunification if that is what the Vietnamese people freely choose, Harriman said.

Chief North Vietnamese delegate Xuan Thuy called the Saigon government "an extremely vicious and dirty reality" and said the Viet Cong guerrillas control more than four-fifths of the territory and more than two-thirds of the population of South Vietnam.

After the talks, Harriman said Hanoi had not indicated it wants to break off the talks. "Certainly from our side, we have no intention of doing so."

AFTER RAILLOT

He was answering a reporter who asked whether the deadlocked talks should be halted until a new administration takes over in Washington after the November U.S. presidential election.

The North Vietnamese spokesman avoided giving a direct answer when asked the same question.

The spokesman was also asked to comment on a statement by UN Secretary-General U Thant that, if the issue of a U.S. bombing halt were put to the UN General Assembly, it would receive a majority vote.

He replied that "the Vietnam problem is not within the competence of the UN."

Clergymen's Disunity 'Misleading' View

Heenan

LONDON (Reuters) — Cardinal Heenan, leader of British public teachings, said Wednesday there is a misleading picture of disunity among clergymen over the Pope's recent ruling on artificial birth control.

"For one priest who has proclaimed dissent, there are 50 content to accept the Pope's decision," he said.

The cardinal said publicity was given exclusively to dissenting priests, but "the reactions of millions of Catholics who expected no change in birth control laws, and would have been scandalized by a change, have not been widely reported."

Cardinal Heenan was speaking at a news conference which followed a policy statement Tuesday by the Roman Catholic bishops of England and Wales on an encyclical in which the Pope gave his ruling.

The statement defended the encyclical but took a tolerant line toward Catholic couples using artificial birth control.

Cardinal Heenan showed a strict approach toward priests who publicly opposed Pope Paul's ruling.

"No priest is at liberty to contradict the Holy Father in his public teachings. There is a difference in a man's official duty as a priest and in views in private conversation."

'69 Pontiac Grand Prix

Grand Prix introduces a totally new concept in personal luxury cars... at a Pontiac price! It's based on a handy 118-inch wheelbase. The interior looks like you should be wearing Captain's wings to slide behind the wheel. Thickly-padded console and aircraft-style instrument panel are completely integrated. The Grand Prix also features a number of bright, new notions. Like a radio antenna that hides in the windshield. Like, if you order one, an electrically-heated rear window defroster. And to remind you that Wide-Tracking is still the driving man's way to go, a 400-cubic-inch, 350-hp V8 lurks under the hood. Grand Prix. Why not put one between you and the road? Soon.

'69 Pontiac Parisienne

Once again, along comes Pontiac to break you away from humdrum driving. This time with a magnificent new Wide-Track Pontiac. Up front, a revolutionary new color-keyed, energy-absorbing material in the bumper centerpiece can take minor bumps and bounce right back into shape. Under the new long-sweep hood, more good news. A bigger, more powerful 350-cubic-inch engine is standard in every Pontiac V8 model. And every Pontiac features full-glass side picture windows, thanks to the upper-level ventilation system. While you drive along, it directs fresh air into the car through adjustable louvers. Wide-Track Pontiac. The break away car for 1969.

'69 Pontiac Firebird

The all-new 1969 Firebird is as exciting a car as you'll find anywhere in the world. Even the bottom-of-the-line Firebird, with its 175-hp, Overhead Cam Six engine offers—as standard equipment—such things as bucket seats (wider and more comfortable for '69); black leather-grain finish on the instrument panel; full-glass picture windows; upper-level ventilation; and an anti-theft ignition, steering and transmission lock. There are four other Firebirds to choose from, each escalating a little in power and pizzazz until you get to the Firebird 400. What a great way to break away from the dull! Get in line at your Pontiac dealer's.

'69 Pontiac GTO

There are leaders. And there are followers. And The Great One, Pontiac GTO, is still kingpin. No matter how the Johnny-come-latelys try, they have yet to snatch the reins from Pontiac's ultimate road car. Small wonder. With its sleek, color-keyed, energy-absorbing front bumper; its standard 400-cubic-inch, 350-hp V8; fully-synchronized floor-mounted 3-speed with Hurst shifter; dual exhaust system; G78-14 redline wide-ovals; stiff suspension; buckets or notchback front seat; and a bookful of options that reads like a racing car manual... nobody else comes even close. The Great One is here. Break away.

'69 Beaumont

Having trouble tearing your eyes from this preview of the new Beaumont? Long hood, short rear deck, wide stance, picture-window styling? Beaumont has it all. All over! What you can't see are new power teams, a new instrument panel, new fabrics and colors, new safety features and a specially-priced performance package that takes a car already great and makes it even greater. Leave the crowd behind. And break away in a '69 Beaumont.

'69 Acadian

Poised beautifully on its 111-inch wheelbase, Acadian proves conclusively that you don't have to be bland to be low-priced. Look at its exciting European-inspired fastback styling. Check out its easy handling and buttersmooth ride. Then run over its long list of options, including the amazingly low-priced Torque Drive transmission. You really can break away from ho-hum lookalikes without leaving the low-price field. Acadian for '69 is the living proof.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia and Fraser University student unions are seeking support from other student leaders in B.C. to launch a campaign against Social Credit education policies in the next election.

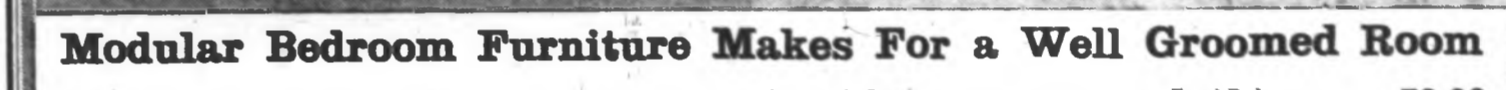

Robert Walsh, newly-elected president of SFU student union, said he will ask student heads throughout B.C. to organize their cam-uses for the next provincial election.

"There are many facets of the provincial government's education policy which we are opposed to, especially university financing which is totally inadequate," said Mr. Zirnheit.

"To combat this we are prepared to organize students to support opposition parties," he said. "We feel the S.U.'s are weak, and in particular in the riding of provincial Education Minister Brothers."

Guards Shot During Holdup

MONTREAL (CP) — Two express company guards were reported in "fair" condition in hospital Wednesday after being shot by three men who escaped with $208,000 from downtown Place du Canada.

The guards, identified as Hugues Poirier, 29, and Peter Johnson, 27, both of nearby Chateauguay, were making a delivery to a branch of the Bank of Montreal in the Place du Canada building when they were attacked in an elevator by three men.

SHOULDER, HAND

Poirier was shot in the shoulder while Johnson was wounded in the hand. A Bank of Montreal spokesman said the guards were employed by Brink's Express Co. of Canada Ltd.

Police said the robbery got under way when a man resembling a "business man" boarded an elevator at the garage level in the Place du Canada building.

The guards entered the same elevator at the next level, police said. When the elevator stopped at the next floor up one floor below the terrace where the guards were taking the money two men wearing masks burst in and shouted "holdup."

GUN PRODUCED

Police said when the guards reached for their guns, the "business man" behind them produced a gun and a struggle followed. The three men fled through the lobby of the Chateau Champlain Hotel.

The bandits left behind three bags containing silver.

Quake Fells Homes In Turkey

ISTANBUL (Reuters) — Thousands of homes were destroyed in a sharp earthquake which rocked eastern Anatolia Tuesday, reports reaching the capital said Wednesday.

But despite the severe damage only one person was listed as killed and nine injured.

Governor Bedri Eser of Bingol province said thousands of homes were destroyed in 60 villages in the provinces. But there was no news as yet from the remaining 45 villages.

One of the worst affected towns was Kigi, where 300 of the 650 houses in the town centre collapsed under the impact of the tremor, initial reports said.

Big Wave Swamps Port City

SALINA CRUZ, Mexico (Reuters) — A seven-foot tidal wave swamped this port city in south-east Mexico Wednesday in the wake of an earthquake whose epicentre was estimated to be about 200 miles out at sea in the Pacific.

Local police reported there were no injuries.

The National Earthquake Centre in Washington reported the quake registered 6.5 on the Richter scale of eight at the epicentre, some 450 miles south east of Mexico City.

The quake and tidal wave may have affected outlying villages along the Pacific Coast near the Mexican border with Guatemala.

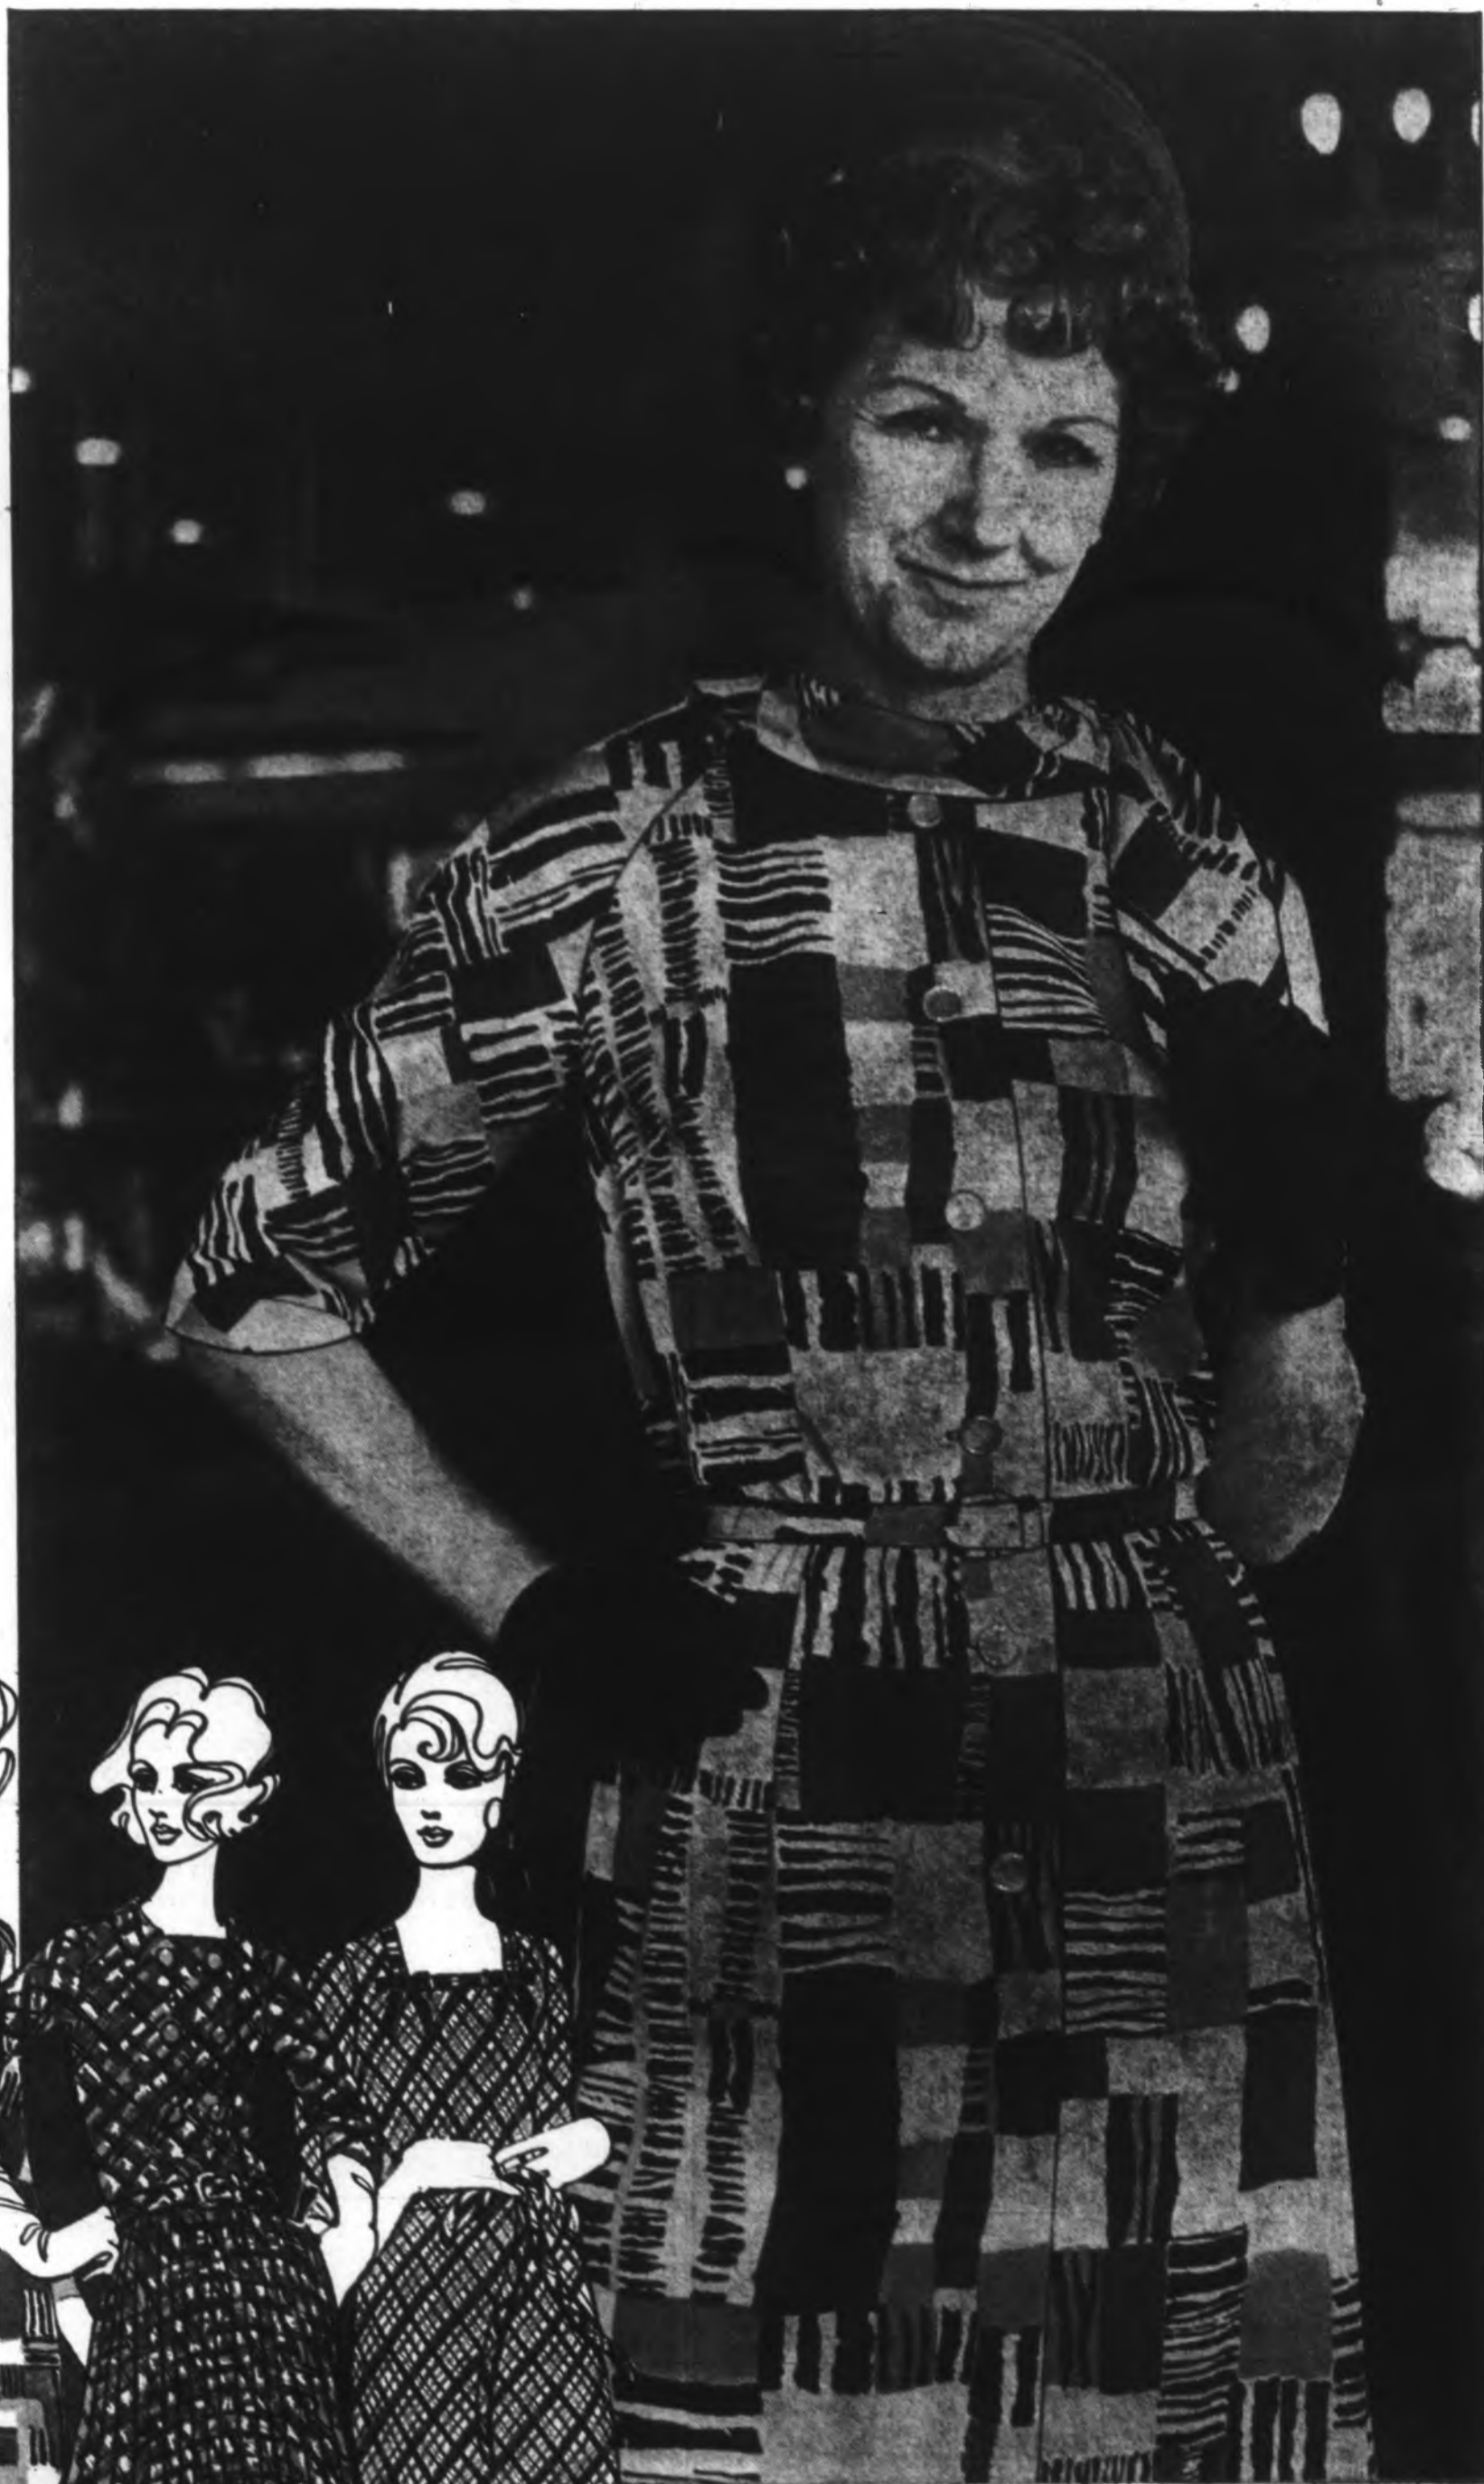

Snowfall Melts

EDMONTON (CP) — The weather office says sunny skies and gusty winds had eliminated most signs of a heavy snowfall in southern Alberta, except at higher elevations, following a weekend storm.

Region Goes to Polls for Hospitals Oct. 26

By DESMOND RILL

Ratepayers in the capital region will vote Oct. 26 on a $3,300,000 referendum to provide 600 badly-needed beds for extended care patients.

If approved, the referendum may also mean the start of construction on a new hospital in Central Saanich to replace the outdated Rest Haven Hospital near Sidney.

Rest Haven Hospital has already acquired an option on 43 acres of land as a site for the new hospital.

However, construction of the new hospital would be contingent on further studies as to its desirability, and would also likely require a "significantly larger" than usual grant from the provincial government.

The hospital referendum being placed before the voters is $2,000,000 less than the amount originally requested by the Capital Region Hospital Board.

The amount was cut by the provincial government. Most of the reduction covers federal government grants which the province apparently assumes will be forthcoming. The hospital board had wanted to include the amount of these grants in case they were not immediately available. The provincial government also cut back on the amount allocated in the referendum for new equipment for general hospitals.

The referendum provides for 600 new beds for extended-care patients, 150 of them to be located at Rest Haven Hospital.

But Health Minister Ralph Lofmark and the Rest Haven Hospital Board have indicated that they would prefer that only 100 beds be provided at the hospital for extended-care patients, and that the remaining 50 be for acute patients.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital Region Hospital Board, said Wednesday at the board's monthly meeting that Mr.

Lofmark's proposal would "obscure" the central question in the referendum—the provision of beds for extended-care patients.

Board members agreed that the referendum was phrased in sufficiently broad terms that its approval would allow money to be spent for acute-care beds if this was considered desirable.

Rest Haven Hospital secretary T. J. Bradley said 150 extended-care beds could be built at the hospital for a basic cost of $1,500,000. He said that if 50 of these beds were to be allocated for acute care there would be an additional cost of $750,000.

Rest Haven Hospital board proposed to the Capital Region board that Rest Haven be relocated and disclosed that it had already taken an option on land in Central Saanich for this purpose.

Rest Haven Hospital board wants this hospital to consist of 100 extended-care beds and 50 beds for acute patients. A sub-committee of the Capital Region Hospital Board, examining this proposal, said the provision of 50 acute-care beds would necessitate "significantly larger" than usual grants from the British Columbia Hospital Insurance Service.

This sub-committee said Mr. Lofmark had indicated this "pilot project" would have "sympathetic surveillance" from his department.

The grouping of extended-care and acute-care patients would be "a new and untried approach to hospital care."

said the sub-committee report, and it would therefore not be unreasonable to expect a greater-than-usual level of provincial government financial support.

In other business, the Capital Region Hospital Board agreed to hire the firm of Public Relations Services Limited at a fee of $2,750 to campaign for passing of the hospital referendum. A budget of $5,000 for advertising was also approved for this purpose.

Private Care

Owners Offer To Sell

The owners of two private hospitals in Victoria said Wednesday that passage of the hospital referendum next month would put them out of business.

They offered to sell their hospitals to the Capital Region Hospital Board at a "fair price" to provide immediate accommodation for extended-care patients.

The hospitals concerned are Glenwarren Private Hospital and Glenlough Hospital, and the offer to sell them has already been rejected by a committee of the hospital board.

ANOTHER LOOK

However, board members decided Wednesday to look further into the proposal, although Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen pointed out that buying the hospitals would not increase the number of available beds for patients in this area.

W. E. Osland, administrator of the hospitals, said approval of the referendum next month would result in construction of hospitals for extended-care patients that would compete directly with private institutions.

A. W. E. Pitherley, consultant to the hospital board, disagreed with Mr. Osland's contention that the new public hospitals would result in the emptying of the private ones.

Mayor Stephen said that if both hospitals were to be bought for extended-care patients, the intermediate patients now in those hospitals would have to be moved elsewhere.

MORE STRAIN

He said the effect would only be to alleviate the shortage of extended-care facilities at the cost of putting more strain on the facilities for intermediate patients.

The board decided to ask the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service to survey the patients now in private hospitals to determine how many would qualify for extended-care coverage.

A decision on whether it would be advisable to buy one or both private hospitals for immediate use will not be made until after this survey is completed.

Pair of Boards May Be Merged

The Capital Region District Board will take over the functions of the Capital Region Planning Board if all seven participating councils approve the proposed terms of the merger.

But if even one council opts out of the proposed merger, the Planning Board will continue in existence.

This was disclosed Wednesday by Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant at a meeting of the district board.

The planning board's present functions would be taken over unchanged by the district board under the proposed terms of the merger.

The only change is that the area now under the planning board would be enlarged under the district board to take in Saanich and the Gulf Islands.

DAY-LONG FORUM

The proposed agreement on the merger will now go to all councils represented on the district board for consideration.

In other business, the district board approved spending up to $10,000 to stage a day-long forum on the issue of disposal of sewage in Greater Victoria.

Final Sewers Meetings As Advance Poll Opens

The last two public meetings on the sewer district consolidation before Saanich property-owners go to the polls Saturday to vote on the sewer district consolidation bylaw will be held tonight.

Advance poll for voters, who will be away Saturday will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., today and Friday in the municipal hall.

One public meeting is being held by Saanich council at 8 p.m. in Gordon Head elementary school. The other has been called by Gordon Campbell, an opponent of the referendum, for 8 p.m. in Mount View high school.

Mr. Campbell earlier challenged the mayor to a debate on the referendum and Mr. Curtis replied that, due to the lack of time, he would allow Mr. Campbell 30 minutes at tonight's Gordon Head meeting.

Mr. Campbell decided Wednesday this would not give him enough time and called his own meeting.

He said his purpose in challenging the mayor, who is also chairman of the regional board, was "to face him with many questions, the answers to which must sooner or later be known."

ALL RECORDS

"Some of these questions to be answered completely and satisfactorily may require the opening to inspection of all records and minutes of the regional board and its technical committee."

"As the half-hour offered could not possibly suffice for a complete and satisfactory airing of my questions, I will address a meeting at Mount View high school at 8 p.m. today in an endeavor to give as much publicity as possible to what I consider to be the important aspects of our whole question of sewage collection and disposal."

Sacred Defeat Over Freeze Urged by Grits

The freeze placed on funds for school construction should be sufficient reason to turn Premier Bennett's Social Credit government out of office, Greater Victoria Liberal party members were told Wednesday night. (See also Page 21.)

Referring to a severe lack of classroom space, Dr. Patrick McGeer said:

"Here in prosperous 1968, in the second most prosperous province of the second most prosperous country in the world, we are not doing anything about the problem."

"It is not a problem of economy—it is a lack of will to do anything about it."

"The government should be thrown out for this reason alone, if for nothing else."

Dr. McGeer, one of two men seeking leadership of the provincial Liberal Party, was addressing the local audience in advance of the provincial convention at Peninsula Oct. 4 and 5.

The other candidate, Garde Gardam, said the time had come to "give the government back to the people."

Confusion between federal and provincial authorities has been denounced as "irrational, inconsistent and ineffective" by a committee of the B.C. Medical Association investigating Indian health problems in the province.

Indian health standards—already poor—will get worse unless the confusion ends, says the committee in a report just published in the B.C. Medical Journal.

"The current division of responsibilities between the federal medical services, Indian Affairs Branch and the provincial health department is irrational, inconsistent and ineffective," the Indian health committee declares.

Conference Urgent

A federal-provincial conference to clarify the situation and set up a comprehensive health plan is of great urgency," says the report.

The study, an interim report, tells a story of high infant mortality among B.C. Indians, chronic illness made worse through ignorance, and early death.

The BCMA committee was organized last January and headed by Dr. P. E. Termansen of Vancouver. Victoria neurologist Dr. Charles Simpson was secretary.

Dr. Simpson said Wednesday that the report would go before the October annual meeting of the BCMA, and that the committee chairman would likely press for action.

A final report won't be written until sometime in 1969, Dr. Simpson said.

In B.C., says the study, Indian babies are more likely to die than the average Canadian Indian baby.

And the national mortality rate for Indians up to two years of age is eight times the national average.

Mortality (nationally) during adolescence and early adulthood, particularly among females, is excessive also. Among women aged 15 to 34 years, the Indian mortality rate is four times the national rate.

At birth a Canadian Indian boy can expect to live 33.67 years, and a girl 36.82 years. If they survive two years, they can expect to live 50 and 51 years respectively, the report adds.

"The approximately 42,000 Indians who live in British Columbia have average Indian birth and fertility rates but a higher-than-average infant mortality rate and a significantly high death rate in adulthood, the latter due to accidents associated with maritime pursuits and with excessive intake of alcohol."

Accidents, Pneumonia

Accidents and pneumonia are the main causes of death among B.C. Indians. Other hazards are maternal mortality, ear infection, anemia, infectious diseases, nutritional and dental problems.

Poor housing, poor hygiene and poor incomes contribute to the situation, says the committee.

Indians fail to recognize early symptoms of illness, seek help later and stay in hospital longer, the committee notes. They tend to have complications aggravated by generally poor health.

"There is considerable confusion in the minds of both Indians and non-Indians with respect to the responsibility of the federal government for medical services," says the report.

"The result is that adequate services at the local level have been denied to Indians by health agencies claiming no responsibility for, or to, Indians."

"On the other hand, Indians often have failed to use local resources and prepaid group plans available to them because they have been unaware of their eligibility for such schemes."

Despite its restrained tone, the report is scathingly critical of government agencies, both federal and provincial. After attacking the confused division of responsibilities it comments:

"Despite considerable correspondence between the committee and all levels of government, this issue is no clearer now than when the committee was formed."

"Major changes are occurring in federal policies relating to health care for Indians and are being carried out. The federal government is engaged in a general withdrawal of services and a placing of the responsibility of providing services on the provincial government and on the Indian people."

Little Preparation

"This change is being undertaken without much preparation or negotiation and unless immediate steps are taken to clarify in detail all matters relating to medical and health care for Indians, it can be anticipated that a decrease in standard of care provided will occur and that inevitably further hardships will be inflicted on the Indian people."

Despite efforts by the federal government to bring Indians into the B.C. Medical Plan, many remain ignorant of how to go about getting coverage, the committee says.

The high cost of drugs is another barrier to good health among natives, it goes on.

City Youth Jailed In Drug Case

A 19-year-old Victoria youth, David Arthur Sainsbury, was sentenced to serve from six to 18 months in the Okalla Young Offenders' Unit when he appeared Wednesday before Judge M. Tyrwhitt-Drake in County Court.

A week earlier he had pleaded guilty to trafficking in a marijuana derivative.

Merger Issue Aired Soon

The controversial issue of incorporation of the unorganized areas west of Victoria will have its first public airing Monday night.

Spokesmen from the incorporation study committee will attend a national meeting of Metochos Ratepayers' Association at 8 p.m. in the community hall to explain the proposal to make a district municipality out of Langford-Colwood-Metchosin.

I never had much truck with those bearded intellectuals who crouch in their bed-sitters planning world government over a can of baked beans. But in golf their idea of a global authority could be put to very practical use.

There is, of course, a ruling legislature, with its seat at the Royal and Ancient, St. Andrew, Scotland. Very fine work it does, too, in sorting out such complex problems as what happens when golfer A has a heart attack, and golfer B claims it as a stroke.

What is urgently required is another world authority—to control the ever-increasing muddle of clashing professional tournaments.

For example, a major tournament was in progress in the United States at the very time the Open Championship was being played in Britain.

This year, mercifully, it didn't dissuade most of the top Americans from coming to Carnoustie. But it has in the past, and will again in the very near future.

With big golf spreading like wildfire, we shall soon be lucky to have even a dozen of the world's top performers at any one event.

There will be rival events in Britain, America and the Far East in the same week, with players playing in one place, Nicklaus in another, and Billy Casper in the third.

Golf, in fact, is in danger of producing almost as many phony world champions as boxing in the post-Clay era.

I cannot imagine why golf has been so tardy in putting its house in order. Soccer, for example, has FIFA—a ruling body which controls every country which plans to play another country anywhere in the globe. Cricket, too, is immaculately organized. At Lord's in London, they can tell you which country will be touring which other country for the next 20 years.

Yet the bigger golf becomes—and it has no rival in any other sport in the world—the more chaotic it gets.

The irony is that the one commodity of which it has no shortage is cash.

The professional golf bodies of every major golfing country can lay their hands on sufficient money to send a permanent business representative to some central office—whether it were in London, New York or Tokyo—where the world tournament circuit could be planned.

It opens up huge new vistas for the game.

What, for example, do we know of Japan's huge challenge to the world? Very little—for the simple reason that in Britain we barely know what Japanese golfers look like.

And how many times have Billy Casper, Jack Nicklaus and the rest flown over to fight for the South African title in Gary Player's home country?

At the moment, golf is only scraping at the surface of its huge potential.

If the game doesn't act soon, there could be serious consequences. There are whispers that the Americans, at least, are considering limiting the number of overseas players who can arrive to compete for their prize money.

Maybe Tony Jacklin's win, and the great rise of British talent, has scared them.

Nothing could be more disastrous to the development of golf as a public spectacle.

There is plenty of prize money to go round. It is just a question of a world body seeing fair play.

Which country will take the lead?

Centennial Stadium Meet

World Records May Fall

Several world records—including the men's discus mark—should be in danger with a good day Saturday for the Pre-Olympic Preview sponsored by the Victoria International Track and Field Society at Centennial Stadium.

Latest addition to the star-studded international field which will compete with the Canadian Olympic Games team starting at 2 p.m. is American discus star Jay Silvester—the favorite for the gold medal in October at the Mexico Games.

Silvester is the current world record holder with a heave of 224 feet, seven inches which he accomplished at the recent American trials.

Going into the current season, the record was 213 feet, 11½ inches set by Ladislav Daneš of Czechoslovakia in 1965. Daneš had a bid of 216 feet, nine inches rejected.

The Olympic record is 200 feet, one and a half inches, established by Al Crier of the United States in 1964 at Tokyo.

Silvester is expected to claim the Olympic record quite easily at Mexico.

Chief opposition for Silvester on Saturday is Tim Voller of Oregon State University, who just missed out on an American team berth with a throw of 204 feet, six inches. Gary Carlson, who won the second berth, is not expected to compete here.

Temperatures a few degrees above normal with little or no rain are forecast.

If it holds true, the mile relay should prove to be a dandy with the strong United States team threatening to Campbell's Report 'Sheer Nonsense'

CALGARY (CP) — Ron Butlin, president of the Canadian Hockey Association, Wednesday termed as "sheer nonsense" Clarence Campbell's statement that players competing in the CHA would find their arrival in professional hockey delayed or complicated.

The National Hockey League president said in Toronto that the NHL would only support the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association because "we feel there should only be one ruling body" in amateur competition.

FORNED IN MAY

The CHA was formed in May when operators of junior franchises in Western Canada and Ontario broke away from the CAHA and formed the CHA.

Butlin said two NHL teams have already been in touch with him to place players on CHA teams "because it is the best competition for a boy in Western Canada."

He said three players recommended by the two NHL teams will play this season in Western Canada Hockey League, an affiliate of the CHA.

Ruth Leach won the putting competition and Peggy Moore was the winner of the pitching contest.

Brilliant Culp and Tiant Blank Senators, Yanks

Ray Culp pitched his fourth consecutive shutout Wednesday night as Oakland Athletics gave the Boston Red Sox a 1-0 victory over Washington Senators. Culp, 34, with Nelson Briles driving in two runs with a single and double on the way to his 19th victory.

The 27-year-old righthander has been enjoying his best season in the majors since being obtained by the Red Sox from Chicago Cubs of the National League.

His six-hitter gave him his 16th win against five losses and run his scoreless streak to 33 innings.

BONUS BABY

Culp, a $100,000 bonus baby with the Philadelphia Phillies, never had a losing season there, but was only 8-11 with the Cubs last season.

He won 14 games in his rookie year of 1963 and again in 1965. Singles by Mike Andrews, Dalton Jones and Carl Yastrzemski gave Boston its run in the top of the first inning and Culp was in control the rest of the way, striking out 11 batters.

ONE-HITTER

Luis Tiant was even more brilliant for the Indians, limiting the Yankees to a first-inning single by Mickey Mantle, as Cleveland blanked New York, 3-0.

Tiant, 21-9, also struck out 11 batters and was given the lead in the third inning on Duke Sims' run-scoring double.

Gates Brown hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning at Baltimore to carry the pennant-winning Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over the runner-up Orioles.

Gordie Howe scored two goals Wednesday night as Detroit Red Wings pounded Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-0, in a National Hockey League exhibition game.

Kent Douglas, Dean Prentice and Ron Harris scored the other Detroit goals before a crowd of 16,000.

St. Louis Blues spotted Los Angeles Kings three goals before slamming the door and going on to win, 4-3.

Lowell McDonald and Ted Irvine, with two, gave the Kings their lead.

A week after Toronto Maple Leaf coach Punch Imlach banned sideburns, Los Angeles general manager Larry Ragan fined four players $25 each when they showed up for dinner without ties.

It was Canada's first loss after five straight victories in the tournament. The defending champion United States is undefeated after five games.

Island Hockey Opens Friday At Esquimalt

The Vancouver Island Hockey League opens its 1968-69 season Friday at the Esquimalt Sports Centre with the seventh annual all-star game between the defending champions, University of Victoria Vikings, and a combined squad from the other three local teams.

CAPTAIN RETURNS

The Vikings will have several new faces in the lineup with only eight holdovers from last season's league and playoff winners when they take the ice at 8:15 p.m.

Back for another season are goalkeepers Wayne Hodgson and Jack Leggett, the hottest goalie in the league in the second half of last season, and defencemen Brian Whitten, last season's captain.

The returning forwards are Glyn Harper, Paul Blon, Terry Foreman and Mike McAvoy. Adding to the "new" look of the Vikings is rookie coach Joe Lannarelli, long-time pilot of the Esquimalt Tudor Monarch entry which has changed sponsors and will play as Butler Bros. this season.

COUGARS JOIN

Former Victoria Cougars junior graduates Gary Hales and Greg Gow are with Vikings along with locals Larry Ellis, Phil Andrejko, Bob Bule, Lance Foreman and Butch Dunston.

Terry Minnis from Notre Dame College at Nelson, Larry Hackman from Vernon, Darryl De Wynter from Powell River, Greg Larson from Winnipeg, Bill Westover from Nanaimo and Jim Haddrell of Summerland help round out what should be a strong club for Lannarelli.

For the All-Stars—coached by Harry Groom—Dave Stones, Ted Barnes, Des Desjardins, Duke Hurford, Cy Simonin and Ray Chester will represent the Queen's Own Rifles.

From Butler Bros. are Ory Coulter, Keith Lawrence, Dave Griffith, Steve Merriman, Ray Gregoire and Ed Hastings.

Stockers' North Americans will be represented by Don Lancaster, Brian O'Neil, Les Bergman, Jim Shewarok, Nick Nicoletti and Tom Mullin.

Frazier Victims Link Up

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe Frazier, the live-state heavyweight champion, has stopped Manuel Ramos, George Chuvalo of Toronto and Buster Mathis, but all three victims want another shot at the unbeaten Philadelphia.

And so does James J. Woody, who once turned down a fight with Frazier before the latter won a piece of the title.

All four aspirants will be in Madison Square Garden heavyweight doubleheader.

WOODY-MATHIS

Ramos, Mexican champion, lasted two rounds with Frazier. Chuvalo went four. Now these two get together.

In the first of the two 10-rounders, Woody, a 6-footer from New York, will face Mathis, who was stopped in 11 rounds by Frazier. Mathis is from Grand Rapids, Mich.

FOUR STRAIGHT

Chuvalo, 31-year-old Canadian champion, has won four straight since Frazier sent him to a hospital with a fractured bone under his right eye last July 19. His record is 51-14-2, including 42 knockouts.

Ramos, an explosive puncher, has a 21-7-2 record including 17 knockouts. He had Frazier in trouble in the first round before he was hammered into submission in two rounds June 24.

Driediger

Socreds Rebel in Surrey

'It Is No Wonder We Did Not Win This Constituency'

SURREY (CP)—The Surrey Social Credit Constituency Association Tuesday night passed a motion of non-confidence in George Driediger, president of the British Columbia Social Credit League.

The vote was 17 to 3 with six abstentions. Mr. Driediger, at the meeting, began to defend his position, then withdrew, saying he'd fight the motion at the provincial convention Nov. 12. Dan Lengert, president of the local association, whose executive approved the motion last week, opened fire by saying there had been a substantial drop in membership and he'd been unable to get figures. "Danny, what are you doing to our organization?" Mr. Driediger called from the rear of the hall. One member then complained that Mr. Driediger had no right to insult the chair at the meeting.

At one stage, Mr. Driediger was heard to say: "It's no wonder we did not win this constituency." The seat was won in 1966 by Ernest Hall, provincial secretary of the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Driediger said membership is "way, way up" from when he took office.

If it had dropped since the last election it was because "some of the members who were signed up to pack nominating meetings have let their memberships lapse."

He said figures could not be made public but the books are open to the constituency organization. Countered Mr. Lengert: "If I can get the membership, why not tell us tonight?" Mr. Lengert said officials have claimed Mr. Driediger interfered in their organization.

There had been poor public relations and personality clashes.

"If you can't get along, you must go."

Mr. Driediger suggested the meeting pass the motion of non-confidence and "we will discuss it at the convention."

Mr. Lengert said later 25 persons who were voting delegates to the Socreds' federal nominating meeting in Vancouver Centre were members of another party, and tipped the scales against the constituency group fielding a candidate.

Delbert Doll, Vancouver Burrard Socreds president, said he believed the mystery voters were Conservatives.

"We never saw their membership fees and their applications were never turned in to the league office," said Mr. Doll.

Bennett Lands on Top In Pre-Session Test

By IAN STREET

Liberal leadership aspirant Dr. Patrick McGeer tangled Wednesday with Premier Bennett in an unscheduled pre-session contest — and to those looking on it seemed to be a clear-cut win for the premier.

Mr. Bennett dropped into the press gallery to discuss his plans for a weekend trip to the Peace River. While he was talking about the government's pollution policies, Dr. McGeer stuck his head in the door.

Spotting the premier perched on a desk, the Liberal MLA smiled a greeting and prepared to withdraw. But Mr. Bennett wouldn't let him. He told reporters: "Now here's the Liberal member for Point Grey."

OTTAWA CRITICIZED

"One day he makes a speech saying that Social Credit is worth nothing and can't raise any money. Then he criticizes this foolish Ottawa government because they cancelled that telescope (Queen Elizabeth telescope) at Mt. Kabaun, near Oshtemo and said to them, 'Sell it to the provincial government for $1.'"

Dr. McGeer, looking uncomfortable but still smiling warily, remained standing in the open doorway while the premier kept pressing his attack.

"That shows how they (the Liberals) contradict each other from day to day," said Mr. Bennett. "Now he's going to run the Liberal party, but it will make no difference. They are going nowhere anyhow."

McGeer

"NOT WANTED"
To Dr. McGeer he said: "You aren't wanted my friend. We've already dealt with Ross Johnson, Ed Kennedy, and Arthur Laing who came here from Ottawa to teach us how to run the government."

At this point the Liberal MLA made his only rejoinder: "They (the reporters present) didn't ask me who I was backing in the Social Credit leadership race."

But the premier ignored him. "It doesn't matter who they (the Liberals) pick next — he is just the next lamb for the slaughter."

CHUCKLES WEAKLY
Dr. McGeer, chuckling rather weakly, backed out of the room. When the door had closed behind him, Mr. Bennett said: "You notice how Liberals never walk out of a room. They always back out."

The premier was then asked for his comment on a Liberal request, supported by Dr. McGeer, for the removal of South African wines from Liquor Control Board shelves in the province to support UN sanctions against that country.

FREE TRADERS
Mr. Bennett replied the Liberals, hiding under the guise of free traders, showed themselves to be narrow protectionists through statements such as the one supported by Dr. McGeer.

He said Social Credit supported the national policy that Canada will sell wheat and non-military goods to countries like Communist China and the Soviet Union. "We'll trade with anyone," the premier added.

Tass Flails Media

Czech Crisis Simmers

From UPI, AP

The Czechoslovak crisis, started with the Aug. 21 invasion of Soviet-bloc troops, still simmered on several fronts Wednesday. There were the developments:

● Zdenek Cernik, the newly-appointed Czech ambassador, appeared in the UN not to discuss the Soviet-bloc occupation of his country during the 23rd annual General Assembly session.

● The official Soviet news agency Tass charged that most Czechoslovak radio and TV stations remain under the control of persons unfriendly to the Soviet Union.

● "More than that," Tass said, "recent statements by some Czech leaders contain, strange as it may seem, praise of those leading the mass media along the anti-popular road."

● Prague reported the Czechoslovak government is to dismiss the directors of the radio and TV. The move was seen as a bid by Czech leaders to strengthen their hand in bargaining with Moscow. At the same time, informed sources said, the government plans to install censors in newspaper offices.

● Hungarian police announced five Westerners are under arrest on "well-grounded suspicion of sedition" after they distributed leaflets on the Czechoslovak situation in downtown Budapest earlier this week.

Quebec Court Upholds English Ban

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Superior Court Wednesday upheld the controversial decision of the suburban St. Leonard school board to eliminate English teaching starting in Grade 1.

The court rejected a petition from two board members for an injunction that would annul the decision. It was sought on grounds two members were elected illegally — a matter before other courts — but the Superior Court said no proof of this was produced.

The petitioners also objected that they were refused the right to speak against the resolution at the June board meeting.

OBJECTION IMPOSSIBLE — Justice Marcel Nadeau pointed out that a formality in meeting procedures made it impossible for them to object.

"Even if they had spoken against the resolution, would they have been able to sway the majority vote?" he asked in his 16-page judgment.

Quebec Premier:

Monarchy Ban Bogus Issue

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson said Wednesday he personally favors abolition of the monarchy, but a Quebec government document suggesting a Canadian republic is "only a working paper."

At a press conference, he confirmed that a Quebec government submission to the constitutional conference included the suggestion to abolish the monarchy.

He said documents sent to the committee of high-ranking federal and provincial civil servants are submitted with the understanding that governments are not bound by suggestions included in them.

It was understood that "they would just be working papers." The premier said the Quebec government document specified that Quebec does not consider the issue a priority, but is interested in the views of other governments.

"The problem of the monarchy is a phoney problem," he said. "If they (other governments) don't want to discuss it, we are not going to make a fuss about it."

The premier said it should be remembered that the Young Liberals in Ontario and the Quebec federal Liberal association have endorsed abolition of the monarchy.

He took pleasure in noting that the Liberal association meeting that approved the abolition of the monarchy was the same meeting that gave a triumphal reception to Pierre Elliott Trudeau last fall.

"We don't want to make negotiations focus on this false problem," Johnson said.

"I have the impression that all the young people of Canada are no longer interested in the monarchy. . . . In the view of the young people it is no longer needed. This is also my view."

Johnson returned to the issue later in the press conference when he was asked about the "royal reception" planned for him when he visits France Oct. 11-16.

UVic Saw Short Of Power

Loan or rental of several power saws is still required for the University of Victoria log saw Saturday, according to Paul Watson, student activities chairman.

About 500 students from all years and faculties are expected to turn out for the all-day event at Clover Point, but only a few of the power saws needed are so far available, Mr. Watson said.

Proceeds of the annual log saw will go to the United Appeal. Price for a trunkload of freshly sawed driftwood is $1.

"We hope to make about $400," Mr. Watson said.

A free dinner of corn on the cob, chili con carne and hotdogs will be given to the logging students.

Two university deans, R. R. Jeffels and R. T. Wallace, will act as chefs.

Music will be provided by the Marquis, a rock band, and Victoria folksinger Valdi. A sock hop at the Student Union Building will end the day.

Manitoba Shakeup

Wholesale reassignment of Manitoba cabinet ministers and their senior aides was announced Wednesday by Premier Walter Weir. Nine of 13 ministers were given new jobs and former Douglas Lafrance, 54, of Arthur, was named agriculture minister. Weir also announced computer and cost-cutting program to reduce spending.

Breach of Civil Liberties Cited

Trudeau Won't Name Suspect

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday that to make public the name of the man in Canada's latest security case would be an obvious breach of civil liberties.

He made the statement as the government came under another round of intense opposition questioning in the Commons over the case, involving a public servant forced to resign from his job after being caught trying to sell classified information.

The material was intercepted by RCMP undercover officers posing as Soviet agents.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker demanded the government name the person involved. If it didn't disgrace would fall on every one who had left the public service since Jan. 1.

Trudeau replied the man's name could conceivably be released without jeopardizing national security, but would be an obvious breach of fundamental civil liberties and basic human rights.

To disclose the name of a man whom the government had decided not to prosecute would be a much greater disservice to human liberties than any "hypothetical disservice" such as that envisioned by Diefenbaker.

Diefenbaker suggested the government, by forcing the man to resign, had tried him without regard for his right to such liberties.

Solicitor-General George McRath told the Commons an inquiry is being conducted to determine whether there had been a "leak" in the case and if so where it came from.

Opposition Leader Stanfield asked if classified documents had been removed from a government office and if so whether all had been recovered. Justice Minister Turner said that, since criminal charges had not been placed, the government would not be justified in making the case a matter of public record.

The same policy had been followed by previous Canadian governments. He cited a 1959 statement by Conservative justice minister David Fulton that in matters of national security the government would maintain "complete reticence." Turner, in a heated response to Eldon Woolliams (PC-Calgary North), said it would be an unwarranted intrusion into the rights of an individual to relate, under the cloak of parliamentary immunity, information on the suspected conduct of an individual.

"How would he defend himself?" asked the justice minister, shouting to make himself heard above loud opposition jeers.

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles asked why the man had been dismissed or asked to resign without any kind of trial. Trudeau replied that, if the RCMP finds someone has acted in a way detrimental to national security, but there is insufficient evidence to support a prosecution, it is perfectly in order for the man to be given the choice of resigning or being fired.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Something has been bothering me and it is going to take a woman to answer this question. Will you try?

Why do some females appear in public with their hair rolled up in curlers? Don't they consider themselves on display when they go to the drug store, the bakery, the market, to the park, on the bus or what have you?

More and more I see women running around with metal and plastic junk attached to their heads. It is, in my opinion, an insult to the world at large. Such women are saying, "You are not important to me. I don't care how I look in your presence." Why do they do it?—MERE MALE.

Think They're Slobs

DEAR MALE: Your respect for others stems from a lack of self-respect. Women who appear in public in hair curlers (ditto short shorts, halters, barefoot, etc.) advertise the fact that they consider themselves slob and feel it is useless to present themselves as ladies.

Dear Ann Landers: We are a young couple just starting out. I am not working at present because we are expecting a baby in December. My husband is in the service.

Character References

DEAR MERRY: Get some character references from three or four people who know you well—a high school principal, a clergyman, the manager of a store where you have been shopping (for cash). If you are new in the city, write to people in your home town. If you and your husband can present some letters from individuals who will vouch for your integrity you should have no trouble getting credit.

Dear Ann Landers: Last year I got VD from the only boy I ever went with. He was 19 and I was 16. I have never even heard of VD and didn't know what was wrong with me. My girl friend noticed sores on my face and guessed. She advised me to go to the nearest hospital and ask for treatment right away.

I took her advice and I am happy to say I am all right now. But something is bothering me. I had to give my right name. How secret are those records? Can any nurse or doctor see them? Can student nurses get into those files?

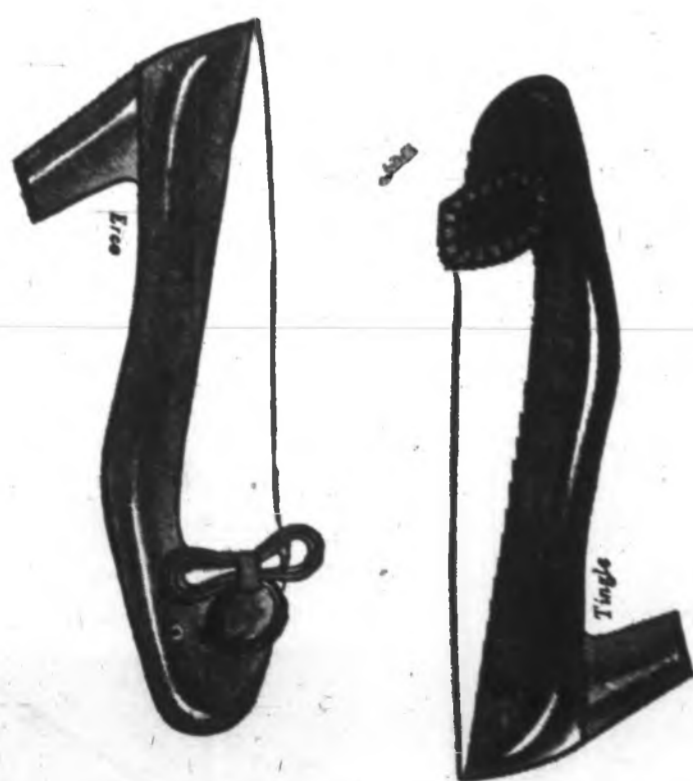

Some girls I know are going into nursing and I live in fear they will find out about me. Please rush your answer.—WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: The only people who have access to those records are medical people who must refer to them for further treatment. Should it be necessary. The chance of one of your friends learning of your past illness is extremely small. Forget it.

Second Love Only Bittersweet

IRVINE, Calif. (UPI) — Love is bittersweet the second time around, and the success — or failure — of remarriage depends upon a subtle combination of factors.

Some of these intangibles were discussed by marriage counselor Ray Fowler in the first lecture on Education for Remarriage, a University of California course.

Fowler, a private counselor in Claremont, Calif., said three major factors operate to make or break a second (or third, or fourth) marriage:

• The previous marital status of each spouse whether they are single, widowed or divorced.

• The presence or absence of children by a former marriage and parenthetically, the ages and sex of the children.

• The significance of a previous marriage in the life of each spouse — whether the relationship was a meaningful, important factor or a brief, passing episode.

"Problems in remarriage," he explained, "develop — and sometimes can be predicted in advance — when these factors combine in a way that requires too many adjustments and readjustments."

Fowler said every man and woman has certain things he or she expects of marriage which may or may not be fulfilled in his first marriage.

Before a second marriage these expectations must be revised. So must a person's expectations of himself. This is true whether the first tie was severed by death or divorce.

"Problems develop when a previously married person's expectations of his new marriage are 'original retreats' — thinly disguised versions of the same feelings he had about his first marriage," Fowler said.

Illustrating his lecture with case histories from his practice, Fowler said a person contemplating remarriage should examine and analyze his relationship to each previous spouse.

"People tend to choose new partners having many characteristics of the former partners having many characteristics of the former partner," he explained. "If they have enough insight into their prior relationship to be aware of why it was good or bad, they stand a good chance of succeeding in another marriage. And I don't mean blaming it all on the other guy if the marriage wasn't a good one."

Most U.S. Wives Say:

One Affair Permissible

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than seven out of 10 American wives believe a single act of adultery by husband or wife should not necessarily be grounds for divorce, according to a magazine poll.

The Ladies Home Journal said 1,272 readers responded to a questionnaire asking if they believed the statement that "a single act of adultery by either partner should not be cause for divorce" was true.

The magazine said 35 per cent said it was "often true," 39 per cent said it was "sometimes true" and 22 per cent said it was "rarely true."

Most of the women endorsed as prescriptions for happy marriages:

• Understanding by the husband of the wife's sexual needs instead of treating her as a mere "sexual object," 83 per cent.

• Behavior between husband and wife as courteous as when they were courting, 88 per cent.

• Respectful of each others opinions even when they disagree, 85 per cent.

• Efficiency by the wife in living within her husband's income, 86 per cent.

From Coffee to Horsemen

Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Nicholson are giving a coffee party this morning at Government House for the area chairmen and team captains of the Community Chest United Appeal annual fund drive.

Isn't this weather gorgeous? I say that knowing full well by the time you read this it could be different. But right now it is noon Wednesday and it is so beautiful out that this is going to be written pronto so I can get out for awhile. Days like this are really precious.

Do hope it holds for the opening of Pine Paddocks at Cowichan Saturday afternoon. George Peakes and Mrs. Peakes, who are going up to Nanaimo on Friday to a legion dinner will be back in Duncan for the Saturday opening. The general will do the official opening honors.

If you haven't heard of Pine Paddocks before—here, in part, is what the card that accompanies the invitation says: "Pine Paddocks, a holding of Cowichan Turf and Stables Ltd., is Vancouver Island's first year-round, all-weather riding facility. Consisting of 23 acres of fenced pastures (nice white fences), Pine Paddocks boasts a 10,000-square-foot indoor riding arena with public seating and adjacent stables."

Not mentioned in the blurb is that this building also boasts a spiral staircase, "probably the only barn that has one," says Dr. Charles Ennals, a Duncan physician, who spearheaded the whole idea.

Dr. Ennals, under whose leadership the company operates, is extremely enthusiastic about the project. Talks of plans for making trails for cross-country riding, and outdoor ring, and so on. He is a keen horseman himself and keeps both of his own horses, Fadias, a half Arab, and Dhuab, and Arab gelding, on the property.

The park-like property is five miles south of Duncan and was owned for untemper years by the Whitaker family. Probably longer than that—I think someone told me that the Whitakers first went there in 1906.

Anyway, this part of the countryside lends itself to this type of thing and the idea should become popular. Accessible, too—right on the highway.

Well known equestrians Dave and Pat Brown, and directors of the company and active managers. They live in a mobile home set up on the site of the original barn.

There will be a riding exhibition in connection with the opening with such well-known riders as C. C. Carpenter, Fran Joyce, Jim Brooks, Darle Ganton and Don McIntyre taking part.

Invitations have gone out to people in Vancouver and all parts of the Island. Among those attending will be the Hon. and Mrs. Kenneth Kiernan, Hon. and Mrs. D. E. J. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bunker, Mr. and Mrs. Zele Martin, Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Ned Donaldson, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Block, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Peary Singh and John, Dr. and Mrs. F. J. Banks, Dr. and

Sister Kathleen Cyr, Mrs. Peakes, Mrs. Rogers, Van Tilburg

Mrs. John Ennals, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Hetherington, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Stone, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Robson, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Halliday, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Green, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Lord, David Mackenzie, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence, Dr. and Mrs. J. N. B. Kelly, Dr. and Mrs. David Reed, Dr. and Mrs. D. McCauley, Dr. and Mrs. O. Qualley, Dr. and Mrs. O. C. L. Glesler, Dr. and Mrs. James Goodbrand, Cmdr. and Mrs. G. R. Barnes, Mrs. and Mrs. W. A. King, Mrs. and Mrs. George Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Horsfield, Mr. and Mrs. Reg Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Jaggars, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Jamieson, Mr. and Mrs. Stan Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Riffe and Dr. and Mrs. P. J. Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. James Audain have moved to Hampshire House, the new apartment next to the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

The Audains are leaving Friday for a three-week vacation in Europe. He will go to Paris for Europe's biggest race, the Arc de Triomphe at Longchamp Oct. 6. This Jimmy Audain will write up for the B.C. Thoroughbred magazine.

The Audains got quite a lift last week when Supreme Victor by Supreme Verdict, the first colt to be bred at their place, Sunnylane Farm, won at Exhibition Park in Vancouver. Jack Short gave them a nice compliment over the loudspeaker after the race.

Mrs. George Peakes was made an honorary life member of St. Joseph's Hospital Auxiliary at the membership tea in the nurses' home Wednesday afternoon.

After president Mrs. W. Rogers presented the pin and cymbidium orchid to Mrs. Peakes, the latter asked, "Does this mean I have to work, now?" Then before anyone had a chance to answer, Mrs. Peakes, well known for her gracious, friendly manner, said, "You can call on me anytime."

Another presentation, a cheque for $2,000, was made to Dr. G. Q. Van Tilburg, hospital director. It was most graciously accepted and earmarked for hospital equipment.

Sister Kathleen Cyr, hospital superior since the beginning of this month, was saying how glad she was to be back in Victoria. Sister Cyr spent the summer in St. Louis, Mo., taking a course before returning to her new job.

Back in the office I told those within ear distance how smart I thought Sister Cyr looked in her reasonably short-skirted black suit and little black pillbox hat. But it was hard to associate this outfit with the Sisters of St. Ann.

"Just keep looking, you'll get the habit," cracked one of the corner guys in editorial, Bruce Lowther.

Freda Saunders was another admirer of Sister Cyr's habit. Was talking to Helen Richards and Mary Nankivell and the latter told me her late husband, J. Howard Nankivell, who was based at Esquimalt, with the Royal Navy before they were married, had named Mary Island after her. They were engaged at the time.

There are two or three Mary Islands in coastal waters. I wonder which one it is. Mrs. Nankivell didn't seem to know herself.

Mrs. Hugh Stephen, Mrs. Hugh Curtis and Mrs. Ray Bryant shared honors as special guests with Dr. Van Tilburg.

Mrs. Van Tilburg with Mrs. A. A. Cowden, convener, and Mrs. C. N. Montague, co-convener, received the many guests. Mrs. R. J. Nation, Mrs. J. A. D. Thompson, Mrs. M. J. Griffin and Mrs. B. C. Cragg poured tea at the table which had a lovely pyramid arrangement of yellow mums, flame chrysanthemums and fern. Mrs. C. A. McGillivray was also responsible for the other flower arrangements, the predominant gold color, lovely against the paneled walls.

Helping to serve were Mrs. F. J. Banks, Mrs. E. T. W.

Nash, Mrs. D. R. Alexander, Mrs. S. Larnson, Mrs. P. Semanchuk, Mrs. I. Douglas, Mrs. C. Hordie, Mrs. A. Grimston, Mrs. E. Atkinson, Mrs. W. Kinsinger.

The tickets on the raffle to be drawn at the November bazaar were going fast. Not surprising when the prize is to be a flight and 14-day stay for two in the new Aloha Surf Hotel in Waikiki. Mrs. E. A. Fehner, who was selling the tickets, was looking the part in a colorful muumu. While buying my ticket, I heard Dr. E. T. W. Nash asking for one with a 7 in it. Mine adds up to 7. Someone has to win.

Others helping were Mrs. R. G. Ryan, Mrs. Barrand, Mrs. A. D. Blair, Mrs. F. G. Stewart, Mrs. N. Ware, Mrs. W. Rothery, Mrs. O. D. Davis, Mrs. V. J. Madden, Mrs. M. Steele, Mrs. L. F. Sim and Mrs. E. J. Michaux.

Sooke Indian Artist

By ARNOLD OLSON

Ida Planes, Sooke Indian artist, aims for the top of the top men.

The 71-year-old direct descendant of the Sooke band's first recognized leader, Chief Jack, weaves hats for Canadian prime ministers.

She sent the first grass hat to then prime minister Lester Pearson, and she is now making one with "P. E. T." across the front.

She learned the ancient Indian craft from her grandmother. Besides weaving, she also does other handwork such as knitting Indian sweaters.

Into her art, she weaves stories. Mr. Pearson's hat depicting the history of Canada's new flag was sent to commemorate the flag being flown for the first time on Parliament Hill. She did not say what the theme for the new hat would be.

Heather and Beau Bound for Alberta

By DON GAIN

If you see an attractive young lady driving toward Edmonton early next month with a horse trailer in tow, the young lady could be Heather Morn.

Heather is leaving her 4½-year position as secretary to Saanich Municipal Clerk Gordon Hayward to become committee secretary in the office of the city clerk of Edmonton.

She said Wednesday she was going to miss her co-workers at the municipal hall, but there were "terrific opportunities in advance" in Edmonton.

She's going to miss the beaches, too.

"I love to ride along the beaches at Witty's and Esquimalt Lagoons. There are no beaches where I'm going. I guess I'll get my friends to send me bottled seaweed so I can smell that wonderful sea aroma."

Heather isn't going to miss her horse, Beau Geste. The seven-year-old gelding is going right along with her, in a trailer.

"We'll stop at Salmon Arm the first night," she said. "There's a horse stroller there. But I dread driving on and off the ferry."

Beau Geste, half thoroughbred and half quarterhorse, was in the news two years ago when he contracted mumps. It took a long time for him to get over them, but he's fine now, Heather said. She boards him at Metchoan.

Heather was born in Victoria.

"But I went to school in Saanich," she said. "Doncaster, Lansdowne and Mt. Douglas."

She took a secretarial course and went to work as a stenographer with the provincial agriculture department, livestock branch, then worked for the RCMP in the crime index section here. After a few months with the National Employment Service, she went to work for Saanich in February, 1964, and has been there ever since.

Heather

The 25-year-old secretary is something of a poet, but she just writes for her own enjoyment and has never tried to have anything published.

"I just write for myself and my friends," she said. "I write about my horse, a beautiful tree, a rough sea or an entrancing piece of driftwood."

Being an outdoor type, she's looking forward to snow sports in Alberta—skating, skiing and ski-dooing.

"And I'm going to like the people," she said. "I found them very friendly."

She met some of them when she was there on vacation this summer.

Wednesday she went through a preview of saying good-bye to her boss, Gordon Hayward, and two of her co-workers, Kathleen Tuckey and Betty Girardau.

Asked what her future plans were she said:

"I'm going to that Edmonton city hall, and I'm going to advance and advance and advance."

Crop Damage Claims High

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia's government-administered crop insurance schemes expect to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars in claims due to weather damage during the last six months, an official said.

The four schemes are expected to be hard hit by damage to Peace River grain and berry crops in the Okanagan and Fraser valleys.

Prize Price Prime

Woodward Stores Ltd. bought a steer from 17-year-old Gordon Mitchell, 2388 Island View Road, Saturday—and paid $2.45 a pound for it.

The 1,140-pound Aberdeen Angus steer was named grand champion of the PNE 4-H stock show in Vancouver and nearly 1,000 people, many of them from business firms, pushed the bidding to $2,795. Current market price for top beef is 28 cents a pound.

TORONTO (CP)—Executives whose homes were rocked by bombs early Tuesday have been warned that the "war" against them will continue unless they stop their alleged complicity with the Americans in Vietnam.

The mailed threats were opened Wednesday at the homes of 10 of 13 executives, all of whom either are or have been connected with the Hawker Siddeley industrial group, whose subsidiary de Havilland Aircraft of Canada formerly manufactured Caribou planes for U.S. forces in Vietnam.

'You Have Been Judged Guilty'

Further Bombings Threatened

Families of the other three executives were not in their homes Wednesday and police have not yet had a chance to check their mail.

The unsigned messages read: "You have been judged guilty of active complicity in America's war against the Vietnamese people."

"Until you desist it is our avowed program to carry the war back to you."

A de Havilland spokesman said Wednesday the company signed a contract in 1962 to supply Caribou craft to U.S. forces. But the contract expired in 1965, was not renewed, and no Caribou have been supplied to the U.S. since.

A $10,000 reward has been offered jointly by Hawker Siddeley and the Toronto police, but few clues have been found.

No one was injured in the explosions.

Most bombs were hidden in shrubbery in front of the homes and the first and worst smashed through double windows and the ceiling at the home of Darwin C. Keistering, a Hawker-Siddeley vice-president.

Other explosions followed within an hour and 18 minutes at the homes of William Baggs and Paul David, president and vice-president respectively of de Havilland, and at the homes of Hawker-Siddeley executives William Walker, Wallace Muir, John Ready, Ivan Bull and Archibald Baile.

The names of two former Hawker-Siddeley executives were also bombed Tuesday.

You can't send the kid up in a crate like that! But they did. The bush pilots who opened up our north country flew in open cockpits with rain in the face and wind whining in the struts. After a trip like that, they were ready for a brew like Old Style. Today it's still slow-brewed the natural way, for men who appreciate a down-to-earth flavour.

Warden to Retiring Deputy:

Door Always Open

A sendoff ranging from serious to humorous was given for retiring Saanich Deputy Police Chief Joseph Armstrong at a banquet Tuesday night.

Deputy Armstrong retires from the force Monday after 22 years of service. There were 150 members of the legal profession and police departments present.

Magistrate William Ostler praised the Saanich force for growth and efficiency which all citizens could be proud of, and congratulated the deputy on his part as a member of the force.

He said policemen were men of many jobs which included a part-time doctor, psychiatrist, lawyer, marriage counsellor and sometimes midwife.

Lloyd McKenzie, guest speaker of the evening, recalled in his days as procecurator for Saanich that Deputy Armstrong was "as good as they come."

But Warden Lou Hamblin of the Wilkinson Road Jail stole the show when he promised the deputy that "the door will always be open to you."

The deputy declined with thanks.

Entertainer Pulls The Strings

By BILL THOMAS

Rex Castle is no international diplomat, but he has pulled strings successfully around the world and made a good living at it. He manipulates nine character puppets in a variety of comedy routines.

Mr. Castle has 36 puppet characters in his Los Angeles studio, but he is using just nine for his road show, now playing the Old Forge.

He dreams up such personalities as Vera Van Bottleby of the Boston Back Bay Bottlebys, and Professor Salami, her beau who plays the grand piano.

Mr. Castle explains, "Puppet comes from the Latin pups, and it means any kind of articulated doll.

"If I get an idea for a character, I make it up in clay and paint it. If I still like it, then I do it in Plastic Wood and finish it in a half dozen coats of paint."

He got the puppet bug when he was small, from an aunt in Los Angeles who was an art teacher.

LAST YEAR

"In my last year in high school, I was stage manager of the theatre group and I was given a massive red velvet curtain. I draped the walls of our garage with it and made a theatre with real seats. I put on shows for 75 or 80 people. I made the puppets and my mother made the clothes."

"In 1954 I went on the night club and convention circuit and eventually did a show for Ed Sullivan on television. I do a Christmas special with a 20-voice puppet choir and still manage to handle it myself."

'GREAT THING'

"The great thing about puppets is they are a totally visual show, and so my act got a good reception in France, Germany, England and Japan. I have done three tours in the Far East and really enjoyed it."

"It does get a bit hard on my nerves travelling with $10,000 worth of puppets, especially when I am on the road 10 months of the year."

MOST VALUABLE

"The great puppet Charlie McCarthy is probably the most valuable in the world. He is worth about $250,000. The original is a work of art in the puppet world. He is one of a kind, and as time goes by his value increases."

"Somehow in North America people hesitate to accept puppets in a night club. They think they are just for kids. My greatest kinks come when people come back after a show and say, 'Now I know what it's about. You really made your point.'"

Montreal Fights Verdict

MONTREAL (CP) — The city of Montreal has formally decided to seek a Supreme Court of Canada reversal of a decision Tuesday by the Quebec Court of Appeals, which held that Mayor Jean Drapeau's "voluntary tax" scheme is illegal.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the executive committee, said Wednesday the decision to appeal the ruling was reached "this morning by the . . . committee on the recommendation of its chief attorney, Armand Page, and his assistants."

CALL FOR MORE

In the meantime, Saulnier said, he is calling on everybody to subscribe "with more enthusiasm" further $2 contributions to the scheme.

The Quebec Court of Appeals ruled by a 3 to 2 vote that the voluntary tax scheme is in contravention of the federal Criminal Code.

Premier Daniel Johnson announced in May, shortly after details of the scheme were announced, that the government had decided to ask the appeal court for a ruling on its legality.

Chess Whiz To Play Students

Ray Kerr of Victoria, last year's B.C. Centennial chess champion and a Class A Expert in U.S. Chess Federation ratings, will introduce simultaneous chess to local schools at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday with matches in Elizabeth Fisher junior high.

Although the number of opponents is not known, it is expected to be substantial — the school at Langford has had a chess club for some time.

School officials and Mr. Kerr plan more simultaneous exhibitions of this kind throughout the district, if enough interest is shown by players.

In simultaneous play, the exhibitor takes on a number of chess players at the same time.

New Path Clarified By French Artists

By INA D. D. UHTHOFF

The present showing of French paintings of the 19th century, at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria until Sunday, clarifies the changes that paved the way for the Impressionists.

We see the sombre painting of The Castle by Georges Michel as one example of what has been called the Treacle School, as popular at that time, but which led to a breakaway in color for its own sake led by Theodore Ribot.

century France there are some gems. It is worthwhile to take time to let this little collection soak in.

Painted in 1864 there is the small oil Entrance to the Port of Honfleur, by Jongkind, of good textural quality, and a small oil, The Fisherman, by Jean Baptiste Camille Corot. This has all the information in it that could be handled on a full-scale canvas or watercolor block.

Mr. favorite painter of the late 19th and early 20th centuries was, and still is, Henri-Eugene Le Sidaner.

There is a nice oil by him in this collection with enough breaking of the color in it to give vibration. His compositions have always been simple, with one dominant mass as a focal point.

But this merely skirts the interest of this koun collection. It has enough to offer the discerning mind and eye.

There is also the sculpture, but much of it belongs to the gallery and can be studied at leisure.

Chevrolet introduces 1969.

'69 Caprice Coupe

Caprice. Match this, you other 69's.

Every Chevrolet has to make it before we mark it.

There is no joy in the land of our competitors today.

But let us ask you this.

Should we have made the Caprice shorter, instead of the longest Chevrolet ever built? Or adorned it with flashy nicknacks to make it look less expensive?

Should we not have made it possible for you to order the new washers that clean your headlights, the new variable-ratio power steering, or the liquid tire chain that you can apply to your rear wheels at the touch of a button from the driver's seat?

Should we not have included a new 327 cubic-inch engine—the biggest standard engine ever offered on Chevrolet V8 models—and let you combine it or any other Chevrolet engine with the convenience of a smooth 3-speed automatic transmission?

Should we have skipped the added interior elegance? The improvements in the Astro Ventilation system, the strength of the body, the quietness of the ride?

Some people think so. Our competitors.

Coquitlam 2,500 Ask School Action

Approved Funds Demanded

COQUITLAM (C.P.) A crowd of 2,500 parents, students and teachers Wednesday night demanded the B.C. government release $6,000,000 in school construction funds approved by taxpayers.

After the placard-studded protest meeting, members of the crowd remained to sign a telegram to Premier Bennett demanding that, as finance minister, he give them an answer by Oct. 9.

School board and teachers' spokesmen in this Vancouver suburb protested a shortage of classrooms and complained that 4,000 students — a fifth of the enrollment — are attending schools in shifts.

"I WILL PROVIDE" Earlier Wednesday, commenting on complaints, Mr. Bennett said in Victoria that more money will be made available for school uses if needed. He didn't say how much but "as minister of finance, I will provide it."

The crowd packed an auditorium, theatre and 16 classrooms at Centennial secondary school and heard Ed Murphy, Coquitlam school board chairman, give this picture of disposition of funds:

Ratepayers approved a $12,800,000 bylaw in the spring of 1967. The education department cut this to $10,800,000. Later, the department said ratepayers could wait for the $10,800,000 or accept $8,000,000 for essential parts of the bylaw. Ratepayers approved this by 75.8 per cent but only $2,000,000 has been released.

COUNTER-PETITION Education Minister Donald Bracken had been invited to the meeting but was officiating at a school opening in Kitimat. As crowds entered the school, they were handed a counter-petition bearing the typewritten signature of Herb Bruch, Social Credit MLA for the Esquimalt constituency.

It said Coquitlam had been given 146 classrooms at a cost of $3,721,155 this year and this represented 25 per cent of funds allocated to date in B.C. in the current fiscal year.

Mr. Murphy contested the figure, saying the school district had received only $2,500,000.

BIG INCREASE Mr. Murphy said the school district grew by 8,316 students last year but the government "will just not accept" the increase in population.

"Children are getting only four hours of school a day. Instead of the five as prescribed. Maybe someone should prosecute us."

Douglas Grant, principal of Winslow Junior high school, said 1,110 students are on shift there.

The system was breaking down, he said, because the kids' teeth were rotting. And, he added: "We have to improve our programs."

Deas Terminal Dispute

Wildcat Strike Averted

The threat of a wildcat strike at Deas Dock Terminal has been removed through negotiations, a spokesman for B.C.'s unionized ferry workers said Wednesday night.

"A meeting of a management committee and a committee representing the workers has resolved satisfactorily most of the pertinent issues," said Norman Thornber of Victoria, business agent of the unionized marine workers' section of the B.C. Government Employees' Association.

It was reported earlier some 100 mechanics and machinists at the mainland terminal had been with "delaying tactics" in the study of the wage issue.

Mr. Thornber said there would be no strike because management of the terminal had met other demands, mainly working conditions.

Chief point was agreement on how many men would be maintained on a permanent basis, he said. "It was a matter of job security that was lacking before."

Artificial Gumweed Model In Museum Display Test

The provincial museum has sample of work, using gumweed, and invited amateur flower-makers as a model. The plant was chosen because it is relatively common on the seashore and blooms all year around. The flower and leaf are complex and require skill to duplicate.

Models will be judged on exactness and durability and should be submitted to the provincial museum before Christmas.

The museum hopes to employ the people judged to have enough skill on a part-time basis or under contract.

Uncensored Newspaper Student Aim

Three Victoria high school students say they will publish a school newspaper free of teacher censorship.

The paper, named Learn, will be produced by Grade 12 students Dale Brand, Rob Rippengale and Jim Halliday in opposition to the official Camosunet.

"The Camosunet is censored by teachers," Rob Rippengale, 2012 Blenkinsop, said Wednesday. "It doesn't print the views important to us."

These views, he said, included opposition to dress and hair length regulations and compulsory physical education.

He said the first issue will include a story about the new Victoria Free School and excerpts from the controversial essay, The Student as Nigger.

Ravens Ground Falcon

A harassed, dark grey gyrfalcon went to ground Wednesday somewhere in Victoria after being attacked by about 40 ravens.

And anxious owner Frank Beebe, who brought three of the birds back from the Arctic, said he was hoping someone would find the bird and call him at the legislative buildings.

"He flew away while I was training him at noon Wednesday. He is well belled, with one on each claw, and well trained," said Mr. Beebe.

Hon. Richard S. Dundas

Wheat Pool Founder Dies

The last surviving founder of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool died Wednesday morning in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He was Hon. Richard Seale Dundas of 788 Island Road, third son of the sixth Viscount Melville of Scotland.

Mr. Dundas came to Canada in 1897 and, after serving in the South African War, homesteaded near the old Hudson's Bay Company Fort Pelly on the Assiniboine River in the Northwest Territory. It is now Pelly, Sask. He farmed his homestead until 1929 and was one of the 24 farmers who founded the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool in 1924.

He was appointed to the Board of Grain Commissioners, a post he held until he retired in 1943.

The family moved to Victoria in 1944. Mr. Dundas was born in 1880 in Tenerife, Canary Islands, where his father was British consul. He went to school in Germany and to the oldest school in England, King's College, Canterbury. He was a member of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club and sailed up to two years ago.

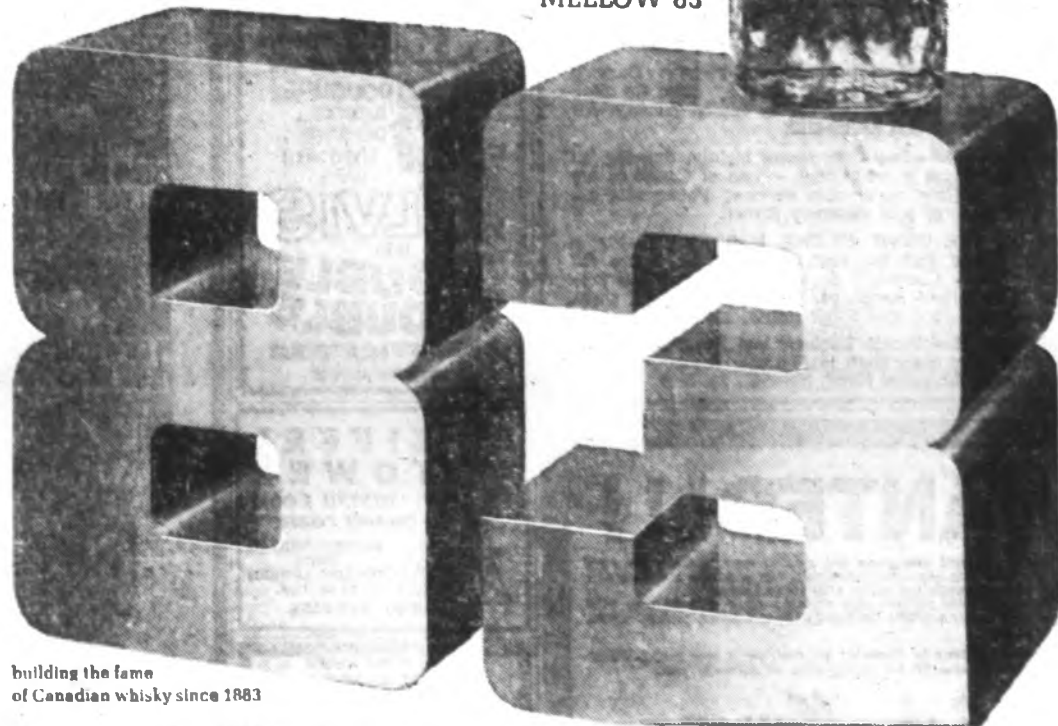

He is survived by his wife, Mathilde; four sons, Hugh of Pembroke, Ont., Richard of Paradise Grove, Sask., Kenneth of Montreal and Robert of Vancouver; four daughters, Mrs. Robert (Planche) Norfolk of Ottawa, Marion and Judith in Victoria and Mrs. R. F. (Ann) Shepherd of Edmonton.

A private family service will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in St. Mary's Anglican Church, Oak Bay. Canon Hywel Jones will officiate, assisted by Mr. Dundas' son-in-law, Dean Shepherd of Christ Church Cathedral, Edmonton.

'69 Chevy Nova

Camaro, Chevelle, Chevy Nova. Who needs to say 'announcing' or 'new' or 'better'?

The way the '69 Camaro hangs together, it's no wonder the other sportsters are gnashing their gears. You won't find a tacky piece of gingerbread anywhere. Or a line that isn't leaning into the wind.

Think of the '69 Chevelle as the 'concentrated Chevrolet.' It's got Big Chevrolet features, but a naturally active personality all its own. Just add gas—and let the rest of the mid-size class step aside.

The '69 Chevy Nova costs very little to get into. Very little to run. And, if you order it with low cost Torque-Drive transmission, available on six cylinder models, it even lets you lose your clutch while you give your wallet a break.

Actor Burt Lancaster:

Night in Jail Education

MALIBU, Calif. (LAT)—Actor Burt Lancaster went home Wednesday after spending an "educational" night in jail.

Lancaster, 54, was driving north on a highway about 11 p.m. Tuesday when a California Highway Patrol car began pursuing him.

CHIP officers John Lilly and R. C. Miller said the actor was doing 55 miles an hour in a 45 zone. When they turned on their red lights, Lancaster sped up to 65, the officers said.

After about three miles, Lancaster pulled into a driveway at Malibu. When a speeding citation was written, the actor refused to sign it and accused the CHIP men of being drunk, the officers said.

He retracted his accusation, but still refused to sign the citation, according to the patrolmen.

Asked why he would not sign, Lancaster reportedly said, "I just want to get an education."

He was booked on the speeding charge, since the vehicle code provides for the arrest of anyone who refuses to sign a promise to appear in court on a traffic violation. His bail was $65, which the actor refused to post.

The next step was to transport

Lancaster to the county central jail, when he posted his bail Malibu court on the traffic jail. He remained there until a cab came to pick him up, charge. He was unavailable for shortly before 8 a.m. Wednesday. He is to appear Sept. 30 at comment.

Moura Lympany
Pianist Shows Russian Forte
 By BILL THOMAS
 English pianist Moura Lympany more than justified her reputation as an interpreter of Russian music to a near-full house at the McPherson Playhouse Wednesday night. She was accorded an ovation and in return rewarded her audience with a series of encores.
 Miss Lympany was heard at her best in five preludes by Rachmaninoff. She has a brilliant technique and exquisite good taste in her playing.
 The program opened with the Bach Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue in D which was probably the best successful thing she offered. Here her style was a touch on the romantic side and lacked the rather remote feeling Bach commands.
 The four Chopin Impromptus were well received and offered with flair, but it was at this moment in the concert that the problems in the upper quarter of the piano keyboard became apparent. The tone is altogether too brittle, brilliant, bright or call it what you will. This piano, despite its august reputation, needs work.
 Miss Lympany had a spot of trouble with the second impromptu but soon recovered. The last of the quartet was quite delightful and brought forth resounding audience response.
 The second half of this first recital of the season opened with Schumann's Papillons Opus Two. It is definitely a showoff piece for the capable pianist and Miss Lympany did wonders with it. She seemed to have a thoroughly good time with it and so did we. It was quite a masterpiece piece in the building each night, of the annual first dance in the Crystal Garden and Club Tango Friday.
 Miss Lympany was recalled and responded with encores. She chose Scriabin, Debussy and Chopin as her gifts to the audience.
 In all it was a thoroughly enjoyable evening. Miss Lympany played well and there was a good house to enjoy her artistry.

Car Damage Confessed

John D. Spelman, 18, and Denis E. Madsen, 18, both of CFB Esquimalt, pleaded guilty Wednesday to three charges of wilful damage under $50 in Central Magistrate's Court.

Court was told the two men drank a "considerable amount" of rum in Spelman's car the night of Sept. 24 and later smashed windshields on two cars and broke the aerial and windshield wipers off a third.

Both were fined $35 on each of the charges and each must pay $48.75 damages to the three car owners. Magistrate Ostler also ordered Spelman bound over on a $350 good behavior bond and forbade him to drive during the six-month period of the bond.

James C. Watson was convicted of breaking and entry with intent to commit an indictable offence.

Funeral

SLAVE LAKE, Alta. (CP) — Frederick Dunsmore was allowed out of jail Tuesday to see his five children buried.

The children, aged 14 and younger, were killed last Friday when fire destroyed their 240-square-foot home near this community 130 miles north of Edmonton.

Dunsmore, 36, started a one-year jail sentence before the fire broke out, while the children were unattended.

His 34-year-old wife Mary was in Edmonton at the time and the baby-sitter was admitted to Slave Lake Hospital after becoming ill.

Dunsmore, convicted of violating the Juvenile Delinquents Act, was escorted back to jail after the funeral.

Exhibit

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — An explosion and fire destroyed a $1,560,000 Israeli commercial exhibition in Buenos Aires early Wednesday.

An Israeli embassy spokesman said the explosion caused by a bomb, but police said they could not confirm this yet.

The fire was brought under control some five hours after the initial explosion in the warehouse-like building in the heart of Buenos Aires.

The exhibit of industrial and agricultural machinery, housewares, appliances and a small Israeli-made plane was the first of its kind in Argentina and the largest the Israelis have ever brought to Latin America. It was to have opened Oct. 3, at the end of the Jewish holy days.

For Half

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada announced Wednesday that a half-fare plan for persons over 65 travelling on domestic routes will be introduced Oct. 27.

The plan allows travel any day of the year at half the normal economy fare on flights within Canada, but on a "space available" basis.

Air Canada said it will accept passports, birth certificates and government documents such as driver's licenses as proof of age until Dec. 1. After that date, it will be necessary to buy a $3 identity card from the airline.

Richter Fears Misunderstanding

'Lottery' Draws Concern

Mines Minister Frank Richter said Wednesday he is concerned about the possibility the public might think the government is conducting some sort of giveaway with natural resources of the province.

The minister objected to use of terms such as "sale," "raffle" and "lottery" in news reports of a Tuesday event where lots were drawn for the right to make first application for permits to explore nearly 9,000,000 acres for oil and gas, mostly in the Peace River area.

In an effort to stimulate new interest in lands where previous exploration permits had been allowed to expire, the government had decided to create an undesirable and difficult situation in the public mind.

"Some people may say, here is a new minister coming in and creating a lottery with the resources of the people, I think the government generally, don't want anything to go around that would appear there was any giveaway."

He added use of words like lottery to describe the process of drawing lots for position to make applications was likely to create an undesirable and difficult situation in the public mind.

Successful applicants must spend a stipulated sum on exploration and if they wish to develop the property they must go to lease, with half of the property covered by the original exploration permit reverting to the province, and then when they go into production pay a royalty.

Mr. Richter said he would announce his decision on the Tuesday applications later today.

Critic Answered

Royal Navy Inadequate?

LONDON (CP) — The British defence department fired a point-blank reply to a naval expert's allegation that the Royal Navy is "hardly adequate for peacetime defence and insufficient for war."

"Generally, the size of the Royal Navy is being adjusted to our new European role," the department said in a statement following criticisms voiced by Raymond Blackman.

Blackman expressed his opinion in a foreword to the 71st issue of the book he edits, Jane's Fighting Ships.

He also wrote: "There is a smug but growing tendency to point to the fact that the Royal Navy has a fleet equal to all the other navies in NATO put together, as though this is a salve for world-role abdication."

The United States Navy apparently was not included in this estimate.

Blackman contended that the Royal Navy has taken "a cruel knock" from policy-makers.

DECISION TO WITHDRAW
The defence department's reply cited Britain's decision to withdraw forces from east of Suez in the 1970s and to reduce the navy's size.

The government took the view that although we would retain a naval capability available for deployment overseas if necessary, the task of guaranteeing free passage through international waterways throughout the world was not one that could be carried out by any single country but was rather

Sterling Area Weighed

LONDON (CP) — Jamaica, supported by Malta, has called for closer collaboration among sterling-area countries in the management of sterling, a proposal which appeared to generate little enthusiasm in the British treasury.

A spokesman, reporting on Wednesday's deliberations of Commonwealth finance ministers, said the initial reaction to the idea was that it was only a preliminary suggestion that presented "some difficulties" and that ministers should "think about it."

Under the Jamaican proposal, a committee would be established in London representing all sterling holders, including those outside the Commonwealth, and would meet monthly to work with Britain in the management of sterling.

That would limit Britain's power as sterling-area banker and probably would act as an advance warning system should Britain again consider devaluing the pound.

Portugal Picks Caetano

LISBON (Reuters) — Prof. Marcello Caetano, 62, was reported chosen Wednesday as successor to ailing Portuguese Premier Salazar.

Caetano is a law professor and was a key minister in the Salazar government for almost 20 years until he resigned in 1962.

He helped to create the system under which labor unions are banned in Portugal and workers and employers both belong to the same organizations. But he is regarded as slightly more liberal in his views than Salazar.

Shawnigan Lake Warning:

Water Not Fit Unless Boiled

Boil all drinking water taken from Shawnigan Lake, the provincial director of public health has warned.

"Some people already sensibly boil their drinking water, others do not. All I can say is that I would not drink a drop unless it had been boiled or treated in some other way first," William Bailey told the Victoria branch of the Canadian Mechanical Contractors Association.

"Shawnigan Lake has now reached the point of pollution where all drinking water should be boiled or brought," he said. "The water from the lake is no longer safe to drink without treatment."

He said checks on the growing level of pollution in Shawnigan Lake had been going on for the past three years.

"A stream, river or lake can take care of pollution, but only up to a certain degree. When you start overloading a fresh water body with raw sewage or other wastes, deterioration is extremely rapid."

He said Shawnigan Lake was typical of a lake that would eventually be destroyed as a recreation area unless tight pollution control restrictions were put into effect immediately.

Effluent in Cowichan

Pollution Control Board Permits River Dumping

LAKE COWICHAN — A sewer permit from the Pollution Control Board has finally been granted.

Lake Cowichan village council members learned that after a two-year wait they now have permission to install sewers and to discharge the treated effluent into the Cowichan River.

The sewer lines will service

550 residents and seven commercial businesses. So far no date has been set for a referendum, but it is hoped it will be held during the December civic elections.

Cost of the project is not yet known because engineers are revising two-year-old figures to bring them up to present day costs.

In other business:

Council will grant $100 to the Lake Cowichan Kinsmen for the children's annual halloween party.

The 10-minute parking regulation in front of the Lake Cowichan municipal hall and post office will now be changed from 8 a.m.-9 p.m. to 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

'On Serious End'

Fatal-Crash Driver Fined, Suspended

NANAIMO — The driver of a $150 In Nanaimo magistrate's court involved in a fatal motor court, vehicle accident south of Nanaimo July 30 has been fined of Vancouver Avenue, Nanaimo, pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving. A previous charge of dangerous driving was withdrawn by the crown.

Coulton was the driver of a car which failed to negotiate a curve on Yellow Point Road near Cedar, careened along the side of the highway for 163 feet, hit a power pole and overturned.

GIRL KILLED

Valerie Outram, 17, of Nanaimo, a passenger in the car, was thrown from the vehicle and killed instantly.

Police said that parts of Coulton's vehicle were strewn along the highway for about 150 feet. Court was told Tuesday Coulton admitted at the time of the accident that he was driving too fast to make the curve. However, defence counsel Ted Strong, of Nanaimo, disputed this and blamed the accident on the "dangerous curve," which he said had previously caused three serious motor vehicle accidents.

SERIOUS END

Magistrate Stan Wardill said Coulton's charge was "on the serious end of the careless driving scale," and ruled him off the road for six months.

Coulton was also fined $15 on an earlier charge of running a stop light. He was remanded to Sept. 30 on a third charge of squealing tires.

Parents to Answer If Youths Stray

NANAIMO — Three Nanaimo juveniles, who have failed to fulfil court-ordered assignments during the summer holidays, have been given until Christmas to do so, or their parents may be brought into court and fined.

When ordering completion of the projects, Juvenile Court Magistrate Stan Wardill put the blame of the youths' inaction directly on the parents.

The youths had been ordered to spend 180 hours working for various recreation groups in Nanaimo as punishment for a number of car thefts.

A probation officer told the court one youth completed 36 hours, another 22 hours, and the third youth only two hours.

The parents, who were present, gave a long list of reasons as to why they couldn't supervise their sons' activity.

One mother said, "Why should I be made to supervise my son?"

Magistrate Wardill replied that if she and the other parents had taken more time to supervise their sons in the first place, the youths wouldn't be in court.

Magistrate Wardill ordered the parents to make sure their sons completed the work before Christmas. "Otherwise there is a possibility that you will be brought back and fined, under a section of the Juveniles Delinquents Act."

Fisherman Still Missing

Three days of searching in Gulf Islands waters have turned up no trace of Ernest Hughes, 32, of North Pender Island, RCMP said Wednesday.

Ganges RCMP said Wednesday night that RCMP would continue periodic area searches, although civilian volunteer searchers had been disbanded. Mr. Hughes' empty 12-foot outboard runabout was found washed ashore Monday following his disappearance from Sunday's Gulf Islands fishing derby.

THE DAILY COLONIST

Russia Accuses Israelis Of Provocation

From IAT, AP
The Soviet Union accused Israel Wednesday of conducting a policy of dangerous provocation against the United Arab Republic, Jordan and Syria. The official warning was one of the stiffest in recent months.
It said Israel is openly defying a political settlement in the Middle East with the support of "certain circles" in the United States.

The Soviet position was read to reporters by Leonid Zamyatin, a top government spokesman and chief of the foreign ministry's press division.
"The path onto which Israel and her patrons would like to push the present developments in the Middle East may lead to very serious consequences for the cause of peace," Zamyatin said.

"Therefore, it is the duty of all peace-loving nations to take effective measures to prevent a new dangerous explosion in the region."
The unexpected policy statement clearly was timed to coincide with this week's opening session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Throughout his discourse, Zamyatin insisted that the U.N. Security Council resolution of Nov. 22, 1967, still offers a genuine basis for a political settlement of the crisis.
That resolution called for an Israeli troop withdrawal from occupied Arab territory, an end to the state of belligerency in the Middle East and the right of all nations "to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries."

The principal point of the resolution was the withdrawal of Israeli troops, Zamyatin said.
Meanwhile in Beirut, the Persian Gulf's three Arab powers — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq — have agreed to form "a deterrent" naval force" to counter Iranian power, the Lebanese newspaper Al Anwar reports.

The paper said the three countries — all of whom have plenty of oil money — have concluded contracts with "certain big powers" to buy naval equipment.

Garden Notes

Holidays Are Over

By M. V. CHESNUT

If you remember, last spring I suggested that some of the houseplants should be given a summer holiday outdoors.

Not the really delicate, tropical subjects, of course — plants like the African violets and the gladiolus can't take the battering of wind and rain — but most of the others benefit enormously from exposure to the weather through the warm summer months. Some of them, in fact, never bloom very well if they are habited and shielded and cooped up indoors all year round. The oleander, the Christmas cactus, the poinsettia, the Jerusalem cherry and the dwarf houseplant rose are always poor bloomers unless the wind and the sun are permitted to harden and ripen their tissues.

It is about time now for most of these to be potted up and brought in under cover. Not all of them, though — the miniature houseplant rose and any hydrangeas intended for indoor blooming should be left outdoors until a touch of frost causes them to lose their leaves. These plants need an annual rest, and they require exposure to light frost to induce dormancy, after which they can be potted up and stored, almost but not quite bone dry, in a cold place for their resting period.

Some of our holidaying houseplants had their pots sunk in the ground up to their rims, and these should be repotted in fresh soil.

After knocking the plant out of its pot — I explained in an earlier column how this operation is performed — scratch away some of the old soil with a kitchen fork, and tease free some of the root ends so they will push outward into the new soil.

If the roots are curled into a tight ball, it is a pretty sure sign the plant needs a larger pot.

In cases where the plants had been unpotted and planted directly into the ground, the roots may need to be trimmed back a bit with a pair of scissors. Always remember that it is much better to cut back the roots than to bend them or double them back to make them fit into a pot.

In selecting a suitable pot, I have become a great believer in choosing one which appears to be just a trifle too small for the plant. When small plants are potted in big pots, the outer soil in the pot is unoccupied and unused, and under constant indoor watering, this mass of unused soil tends to become sour and stagnant, and the plant's health suffers accordingly; this is a very common cause of houseplant disorders.

In a smaller pot, all the soil is occupied and in active use; you may have to water more frequently, but the plants are healthier and bloom more freely.

Before repotting, old used pots should be scrubbed thoroughly in hot, soapy water, and I think it pays to add a little household disinfectant to the water to kill off any moulds or disease spores. White scum on the outer walls of earthenware pots can be removed by scrubbing with moist Javelle bleach.

It is a good idea, when potting, to put about an inch of clean, small gravel in the bottom of each pot. Not that gravel as such has any magical properties contributing to plant growth — lots of gardeners use bits of smashed flower pots instead.

A layer of anything contributes to better drainage, and is good insurance against the most common cause of houseplant failure — over-watering.

If you have occasion to buy new flower pots, I would like to get in a plug for the Placit pots made of styrofoam. These are cleaner than clay pots, stronger than ordinary plastic, as light as a feather and with thickish walls that always feel warm to the touch.

My plants seem to like them, I think perhaps because styrofoam is a good insulator and the plant roots enjoy an almost constant temperature.

ART BUCHWALD Presses the Accelerator

'The Hit-and-Run Society'

WASHINGTON — Ex-Governor George Wallace has finally cleared the air as far as the 1968 presidential campaign is concerned. The main issue is, "If you were president of the United States, would you or would you not drive over someone who lies in front of your car?"

Mr. Wallace has been getting his biggest bang when he says, "The first anarchist who lies down in front of my automobile when I become president, that's the last automobile he'll ever want to lie down in front of."

This remark has led many Americans to believe that Mr. Wallace is elected he will call his administration the "Hit-and-Run Society."

It is interesting to note that neither Vice-President Humphrey nor Richard Nixon has indicated where he stands on running over people. This has come as a big disappointment to those of us who are concerned with the issue of "law and order."

The Nixon people have hinted that running over anarchists is a local matter and should be decided by the people in each community. The Humphrey people, on the other hand, feel the federal government should decide who should and should not be run over by the president of the United States.

Neither the Republican nor Democratic candidate will take a public stand on this pressing issue, and Wallace is therefore attracting every bad driver in the country to his cause.

There has been some grumbling among constitutional experts that driving over anarchists is not a presidential function. They point out that it's very difficult, with traffic the way it is today, to know who is an anarchist and who isn't; and it's quite possible that an innocent person could be squished to death before President Wallace realized his mistake.

Furthermore, these experts say, even if Wallace only killed anarchists, some president in the future might not be so discriminating, and could use his power to run over whomever he pleased.

But Wallace supporters have rejected these criticisms as pseudointellectual, left-wing press propaganda. They point out that there is nothing in the constitution to prevent the president of the United States from hitting whomever gets in the way of his car.

Besides, they say, there will never be any respect for the office of the presidency until a few anarchists feel the full weight of a White House limousine.

Some observers are worried, though, that Wallace will not be content just to run over anarchists. He has said in his speeches that if he is elected he's going to put the Supreme Court justices in their place. This could mean any number of things. He could cut down the power of the court, he could draft all the justices into the army, or he could drive up to the Supreme Court Building at recess and see how many Supreme Court justices he could knock down with his bumper.

Whether it will come to that or not, the feeling here in Washington is that Mr. Humphrey and Mr. Nixon cannot remain silent much longer on the "right to run over" issue that George Wallace has so ably raised.

The public wants to know not only whose finger will be on the atomic button in the White House, but also whose foot will be on the accelerator of the presidential car.

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Wayne Protesting Che

HOLLYWOOD — John Wayne is protesting the film Che Guevara with Omar Sharif playing the communist revolutionary. It was interesting seeing Omar at the New York premiere of Funny Girl and watching him kiss the cheek of Barbra Streisand who was very much present with her husband. "She is a fantastic woman," Omar was saying. I didn't like to ask him if he still plays her records all the time as he did for a long while after they finished the film.

And while we're on the subject, Franco Nero is a sad Italian on the set of The Magnificent Seven. Because Vanessa Redgrave is tied up with The Seagull in Stockholm, and unable to visit the handsome actor who played Sir Lancelot to her Queen Guinevere in Camelot, Franco complains that U.S. food ruined his stomach.

It's a good thing Anna Magnani did not stamp Anthony Quinn when she lashed out with her foot — and missed him — for a scene in The Secret of Santa Vittoria. While Anna is limping from her fractured foot, Tony is congratulating himself on his escape.

Carry Grant put a six-foot fence around his Beverly Hills swimming pool. He's taking no chances when his two-year-old daughter visits him. The best defense is to teach her to swim. They learn early in California. I remember when the James Massons and their Party taught to swim when she was a few months old. She was tossed in the water by her teacher and paddled for dear life.

Cliff Robertson and his wife Diana Merrill are selling their New York apartment and will settle in California. They have made one film together for Universal's World Premiere series. Cliff is now working on two scripts and promoting his excellent film, Charly.

Patti Page spent $20,000 on the six gowns she will wear at her Americana's Royal Box engagement, so you know she intends to look her prettiest. Patti and her husband Charles O'Connor, who was once married to Betty Hutton, have two adopted children and are considering a third. Patti was one of 11 children.

A Nation of Cynics

SYDNEY HARRIS

In one of his most famous epigrams, Oscar Wilde defined a cynic as "a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing."

In one respect, we seem to be becoming a nation of cynics—in that we increasingly tend to judge the value of everything by its price.

Last week I was lunching with a friend who is a widely known novelist. He told me that he had become exhausted on the lecture circuit and decided to double his fees in order to cut down on the number of groups that could afford to hire him.

"You know what happened?" he asked. "I got twice as many requests for lectures. When these groups learned I was twice as expensive, they wanted me twice as much, because they thought I was twice as good. What can you do with that kind of thinking?"

Of course, with many products there is a direct ratio between price and value. I have never bought a "cheap" suit of clothes that looked as good, or felt as good, as an expensive suit. But this is by no means true of all products.

I know some people who started a cosmetics company years ago, putting out an excellent cold cream in a small plain jar for a dime. They lost a great deal of money until a "packaging expert" designed a fancy jar for them, and increased the price to $1.50 for the same amount of cream. The revenue went soaring down the drain to buy this "exclusive" formula.

Of course, in one sense, any commodity is "worth" what people are willing to pay for it. There is a psychological as well as a merely economic factor in all buying.

The outrageous scalping of theatre tickets to Broadway hits has less to do with the intrinsic value of the play than with the vanity of having seen it before others have.

But when price becomes so divorced from value, there is then a great temptation to reverse the superficial aspects of a product and to sacrifice the inherent value.

Spending Exceeds Ottawa Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will exceed its self-imposed spending target by $335,000,000 in the current fiscal year according to revised estimates brought before Parliament Wednesday.

Rapidly rising payments to programs under provincial control will wipe out a long list of federal budget cuts, leaving the government with record spending of $12,551,530,386, the estimates forecast.

The figure includes a first-year cost of $35,000,000 for medical care insurance and a separate bill for old age pensions of $1,581,000,000.

NEW DEPARTMENTS

The government's reorganization of departments made the revision of estimates necessary.

In the Commons, opposition MPs were quick to notice the escalating costs and to ask what had happened since the original estimates for the fiscal year ending next March 31 were tabled seven months ago.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury denied to reply, conceding an increase in the total, and was drowned out by opposition howls and jeers.

DEBT COST — The total amount is three per cent more than the $11,865,732,632 included in the original estimates.

Payments towards hospital insurance, welfare and post-secondary education programs together show increases of $229,000,000 from the February totals. Public debt costs are up by $67,137,700 to $1,474,006,900.

Both Finance Minister Edgar Benson and his predecessor Mitchell Sharp have promised to hold budgetary spending this year to $10,300,000,000, apart from medical care insurance costs.

The part of the estimates defined as "budgetary" total $10,670,530,598 in the revised forecasts released Wednesday. The total in February's original estimates was $10,284,732,032.

There were cuts in all branches of government except the appropriations for the office

Trudeau Cuts At Home

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has reduced expenses at his official residence by 500,000 per cent — as part of the government's cost-cutting program in the current fiscal year.

Revised estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday provided $50,380 for the prime minister's residence, down from $11,100, in the original estimates last February.

The food budget is reduced $300 to $6,700, entertainment by $300 to $3,700 and household salaries $200 to $17,000.

Trudeau, in line with past practice, has $3,000 deducted from his $43,000 salary to help meet the expenses of running the prime minister's residence.

Primate's Views on Pope's Encyclical:

Acts in Good Faith No Sin

● Liberal Dutch scholar faces Vatican heresy trial. Page 10.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Maurice Cardinal Roy, Roman Catholic primate of Canada, said Wednesday those who use contraceptive measures in good faith are not guilty of a sin.

"That is the general principle of moral theology," Cardinal Roy told a news conference at the Canadian Catholic Conference. (See also Page 10.)

"If one is in good faith, even if his idea is wrong, he is not guilty of a sin. But to be in good faith, one must be prudent."

"You must have serious reasons and not only just an impression of the moment."

The cardinal, here to take part in the semi-annual meeting of Canadian bishops, was replying to a question on the Pope's encyclical.

He said he was agreeing with a statement by bishops in Belgium that said Catholics should follow an informed conscience.

The 80 bishops attending the conference are trying to map out a statement on the encyclical to be released Thursday night for guidance of Canada's 8,500,000 Catholics.

"I don't want to prejudice what the bishops will say," the cardinal said. "This has to be said very carefully."

"We have to deal with those who have not understood, have not accepted, the truth or law (of the encyclical) and then we have to say are they in sin or not in sin."

Bishop G. Emmett Carter of London, Ont., said earlier the conference is not trying to write a new encyclical but only trying to offer guidance on its application.

He said the encyclical is accepted as a fact.

Asked if he brought any message from Rome to the bishops to help them in their deliberations, the cardinal said there was no official message but that he "will take part in discussion and bring them my personal assistance."

The cardinal, who is also Archbishop of Quebec, arrived here from Rome earlier Wednesday.

He is president of a pontifical commission on justice and peace and also of a lay

council, both with headquarters in Rome.

The cardinal said the lay commission meetings are developing slowly because various countries do not want a council in Rome to "control the national organization."

The justice and peace commission deals with study of political, economic and social conditions throughout the world. It advises the Pope prior to his making statements dealing with church policy on such matters.

Cardinal Roy said the biggest problem faced by the commission is one of motivation.

He said it is necessary to motivate peoples of the world to do a little more toward helping developing countries and poverty-stricken regions.

Let Provinces Name Senators, Says B.C.

By IAN STREET

B.C. will propose at the next federal-provincial conference on the constitution that the provinces be given the right to appoint senators, with representation being determined on a population basis, Premier Bennett announced Wednesday.

The premier said a press conference that the provincial government would take a firm position that the senate should either be "reorganized" or abolished.

He also said B.C. was seeking "a floor on the purchasing power" of Canadians from coast to coast. The way to correct regional disparity, the premier added, was to cancel the present equalization payments to the poorer provinces in favor of financial assistance provided directly to those in the low-income group.

UNIFORM STANDARD — A start could be made, Mr. Bennett suggested, with those in the worst-paid ranks of the labor force by adopting a uniform minimum wage standard across Canada.

The press conference took place when the premier advised reporters of his plan to travel by PGE train to Saturday ceremonies marking the turning on of power generated at the W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River. Other participants and invited guests are travelling to Portage Mountain in three chartered aircraft.

Mr. Bennett said he would not tell his critics, "I told you so," now that the grand project had been virtually completed.

ANSWER ENOUGH — "When the power from the Peace hits Vancouver, that will be answer enough. This will be the brightest day in our history for the people of British Columbia. I remember all the seceders, the critics who said it couldn't be done, we couldn't transmit power over that distance, and that the government should be kicked out of office."

The premier said the province's two-river policy had worked "wonderfully well" and added: "I don't blame the critics — I must feel sorry for them."

Mr. Bennett said the proposal for appointment of senate representatives would be discussed at the next federal-provincial conference.

Road to Democracy

Troop-Flouting Czechs Still Planning Reform

PRAGUE (AP) — With more than 500,000 Warsaw Pact troops still occupying Czechoslovakia, the nation's reform-minded Communist party reaffirmed Wednesday it will press on with reforms designed to make the party function more democratically.

The reform is contained in the party's proposed statutes, which have been criticized in the Soviet Union as being counter-revolutionary. They were first published 10 days before the Soviet military invasion.

The new statutes would provide such reforms as secret balloting and publication of minority opinions. Both are in opposition to Moscow-style communism.

The reassertion came against a background of delays in a trip to Moscow by the Czechoslovak leadership to discuss further Soviet demands aimed at curbing liberal reforms and a withdrawal of some of the troops.

There were rumors that Soviet and Czechoslovak leaders had sharp differences over the composition of the Czechoslovak delegation and over the agenda.

The reassertion to proceed with the party reform came in a Rude Pravo interview with R. Fikus, chief of the central committee's organizational and political section. Rude Pravo is the official organ of the Czechoslovak party.

The draft statutes are to be voted on at the party's 14th congress, at a date not yet set.

50,000,000 Can Be Wrong

Patriotic Computer Explodes Population

PARIS (UPI) — President de Gaulle was given the embarrassing news Wednesday — 50,000,000 Frenchmen can be wrong.

The figure of 50,000,000 Frenchmen, that is, Last Nov. 3, France proudly announced the birth of its 50,000,000th citizen — a baby girl named Sibylla Lacroix. And a flood of gifts rained down on the parents of the baby.

But that has turned out to be a mistake committed by a wayward computer, it was disclosed Wednesday.

Two cabinet ministers at Wednesday's cabinet meeting had the unenviable task of reporting to de Gaulle the results of a government-sponsored census that showed France had 48,700,000 citizens last April — six months after the bureau of statistics placed the figure at 50,000,000.

When he reached the counter, the woman clerk asked him what he had on his back and he replied, "A parachute. It's my first trip and I'm scared."

The clerk decided to check with the manager, who told Catt to take off the chute or he couldn't get a ticket.

Catt decided to try American Airlines and again was confronted by the manager.

he was headed. Catt told him New York.

Catt drew the stares of countless passersby, and one porter backed up his hand-truck about 15 feet to take a second look.

Johnson Warning

Our Troubles, Not Yours, France Told

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Premier Daniel Johnson warned France Wednesday in effect to stay out of Quebec's troubles with English-speaking Canada if it values the province as the biggest French-language bastion of the New World.

"If I believed that in our relations with France the French were trying to destroy our country, I would consider it my duty not to continue relations with France," Johnson told a nationally televised and broadcast news conference.

He added that French President de Gaulle, who shocked Canadians during a visit here last year by telling a crowd "Vive Quebec Libre" — Long Live Free Quebec — "can have his opinions on the Canadian Confederation, and we can have our own."

SETTLED HERE — "This problem will be settled in Canada," he said.

Johnson, who flies to Paris next month for talks with de Gaulle and a reception normally reserved for heads of state, spelled out his stand on the French government's possible influence on Quebec policies at his first news conference since he suffered a heart attack July 3. He returned here last week from a holiday in Bermuda.

He said that mounting reports of French moves to interfere in the future of Quebec, a province that is bigger than France

At present, all ministers available in the capital attend the question session daily. The question periods, by House rules, last from 30 minutes to one hour. Only a half hour is set aside Wednesday.

Trudeau said it is necessary if they are to have more time for departmental business.

Cabinet meetings in recent months were being conducted on a committee system to give ministers greater time on departmental affairs.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the change was "most regrettable." He urged the prime minister to reconsider and submit the proposal to the committee — just established to study changes in Commons rules.

'Are You Going All the Way?'

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — A newspaper reporter who tried to buy an airline ticket at Philadelphia International Airport while wearing a parachute found that the airlines want no part of do-it-yourself safety programs.

Pottstown Mercury editor Robert Boyle assigned Gary Catt, 22, to the story and it was printed Wednesday.

Catt walked into the airport's main building with the parachute strapped on his back and immediately found a security guard with a walkie-talkie following him up the escalator.

The reporter stood in line at the United Airlines counter. Several army paratroopers in the next line stared at him and one finally asked where he was headed. Catt told him New York.

Without cracking a smile, one paratrooper asked, "You planning to get out somewhere between here and there?" Catt tried to ignore him.

Straining for team's goal, excited North Cedar Elementary pupils play 'push ball'

Simple Exercise Fosters Team Spirit

Nanaimo Students Are on the Ball

Story and Picture
By AGNES FLETT

NANAIMO—The school district is on the ball these days, and it's a giant ball at that.

Two balls have been brought by the school board through the efforts of the physical education supervisor, Bruce Wallace. They cost $270 each. They are 3.5 feet in diameter, weigh 30 pounds when inflated, and are made like a giant soccer ball—with a rubber bladder covered by a heavy canvas skin.

Mr. Wallace believes this game is the answer to physical education, for every muscle is used in the process of moving one. If the enthusiasm shown so far continues, more will be bought. The game is usually played like soccer, with two teams and two goals.

However, there are many varieties; for example, four teams could try and push it in four different directions.

If the ball bounces on top of the youngsters it does not hurt them.

Mr. Wallace read about the balls in the U.S. where they are being used at universities. They are not yet common in B.C.

Mr. Wallace said he thought it a perfect way for pupils to enjoy much-needed exercise, and to foster team spirit at the same time.

"It's not expensive either. It can be used for physical education training in the place of expensive gym equipment and buildings.

It can be played indoors or out, but outdoors is more fun—and more healthy too in the fresh air and sun.

The tiny tots obviously enjoy the game, both while playing and watching on the fence they get hilariously excited.

Mr. Wallace predicts the game will promote serious interest in school sports on a grand scale, allowing everyone to participate. "The game of the future," he says.

Shawnigan Lake Warning:

Water Not Fit Unless Boiled

Boil all drinking water taken from Shawnigan Lake, the provincial director of public health has warned.

"Some people already sensibly boil their drinking water, others do not. All I can say is that I would not drink a drop unless it had been boiled or treated in some other way first," William Bailey told the Victoria branch of the Canadian Mechanical Contractors Association.

"Shawnigan Lake has now reached the point of pollution where all drinking water should be boiled or brought," he said. "The water from the lake is no longer safe to drink without treatment."

He said checks on the growing level of pollution in Shawnigan Lake had been going on for the past three years.

"A stream, river or lake can take care of pollution, but only up to a certain degree. When you start overloading a fresh water body with raw sewage or other wastes, deterioration is extremely rapid."

He said Shawnigan Lake was typical of a lake that would eventually be destroyed as a recreation area unless tight pollution control restrictions were put into effect immediately.

Effluent in Cowichan

Pollution Control Board Permits River Dumping

LAKE COWICHAN — A sewer permit from the Pollution Control Board has finally been granted.

Lake Cowichan village council members learned that after a two-year wait they now have permission to install sewers and to discharge the treated effluent into the Cowichan River.

The sewer lines will service

530 residents and seven commercial businesses. So far no date has been set for a referendum, but it is hoped it will be held during the December civic elections.

Cost of the project is not yet known because engineers are revising two-year-old figures to bring them up to present day costs.

In other business: Council will grant $100 to the Lake Cowichan Kiwanis for the children's annual Halloween party.

The 10-minute parking regulation in front of the Lake Cowichan municipal hall and post office will now be changed from 8 a.m.-9 p.m. to 9 a.m.-6 p.m.

On Serious End

Fatal-Crash Driver Fined, Suspended

NANAIMO—The driver of a car involved in a fatal motor vehicle accident south of Nanaimo July 30 has been fined $150 in Nanaimo magistrate's court.

Richard Patrick Coulton, 22, of Vancouver Avenue, Nanaimo, pleaded guilty to a charge of careless driving. A previous charge of dangerous driving was withdrawn by the crown.

Coulton was the driver of a car which failed to negotiate a curve on Yellow Point Road near Cedar, careering along the side of the highway for 163 feet, hit a power pole and overturned.

GIRL KILLED

Valerie Outram, 17, of Nanaimo, a passenger in the car, was thrown from the vehicle and killed instantly.

Police said that parts of Coulton's vehicle were strewn along the highway for about 150 feet. Court was told Tuesday Coulton admitted at the time of the accident that he was driving too fast to make the curve.

However, defence counsel Ted Strongtham of Nanaimo, disputed this and blamed the accident on the "dangerous curve" which he said had previously caused three serious motor vehicle accidents.

SERIOUS END

Magistrate Stan Wardill said Coulton's charge was "on the serious end of the careless driving scale," and ruled him off the road for six months.

Coulton was also fined $15 on an earlier charge of running a stop light. He was remanded to Sept. 30 on a third charge of squalling tires.

'You're on Thin Ice'

Youth's Sentence Without Leeway

NANAIMO — Lee Sheppe, 16, of Cedar, received a two-year adult sentence with very stringent terms when he was sentenced in Nanaimo Magistrate's Court for breaking and entering and dangerous driving.

The breaking and entry charge resulted from an incident on May 26, when Sheppe broke into the Cassidore Air Services building at Cassidy Airport and took $468, court was told. The dangerous driving incident occurred on Sept. 9.

On the dangerous driving charge, Sheppe was fined $100 which he must repay at $25 per month. He was banned from driving for two years. He must also attend the emergency ward of the Nanaimo Regional Hospital every Saturday night for two hours during his suspended sentence.

"You're skating on very thin ice," Magistrate Stan Wardill warned. "If you break any of the terms of your suspended sentence you will go straight to Oakalla."

He must attend night school. He will not be allowed to own a

Under the terms of the two-year suspended sentence for the first charge, Sheppe was placed on a 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. curfew, unless attending night school or out with his parents.

Old Age Pensioners

Convention Proposals Go to Ottawa Members

DUNCAN — Resolutions submitted at the provincial convention of old age pensioners at Vernon recently will go to federal government members of the Old Age Pensioners' Organization, Duncan branch learned at their recent monthly meeting.

Participants at the convention felt annual old age pensions should be raised to $2,000 for single persons and $3,500 for married couples.

Other resolutions dealt with the price of drugs, the age of entitlement by women being lowered to 60 years and the income tax exemption level being raised for pensioners.

Members were told that their resolution to have the name of the organization changed had been turned down.

One member suggested Canadian United Pensioners would be an improvement.

The subject will be reintroduced at the next meeting of the Vancouver Island council in Nanaimo.

Mrs. C. White said, "Old suggests discarded, such as old shoes, old clothes and old bottles. People are not old now at 65."

"Soon everybody reaching the age of 65 will be a pensioner and most will resent being called old aged."

H. J. Vickers was appointed as the Duncan branch representative to attend a seminar being arranged at the new elderly citizens' branch of the municipal affairs department in Victoria.

Purpose of this seminar is to become acquainted with all up-to-date information, and so become a local councillor in elderly citizens who do not know where to obtain advice their personal problems.

Mr. Frumento said under the new education department formula, ratepayers will have an opportunity to vote down additional school costs if they are in excess of 110 per cent of the cost of the education program based on the provincial school taxation average.

The chairman said, "I wonder if the public is fully aware of the demand on the tax dollar."

"As I pointed out earlier, we may face a 9.07-mill increase next year, including the regional college, recreation, bylaw and rise of school costs, without immediate housing in 1969 and for future construction."

The chairman expressed his doubts whether the public is aware of another massive tax increase next year.

He said, "The board's concern and mine is that taxpayers eventually will rebel against tax increases."

"We have a recreation bylaw coming up totalling 4.32 mills, the regional college next year will be three quarters of a mill and if our school mill rate increases on the same basis as it has for the past several years, then we shall need another four mills for educational purposes."

Land Developer Also Under Fire

Council Clamps Down On Errant Taxi Firm

CAMPBELL RIVER — Council has taken decisive action to correct two nagging conditions. A local taxi firm about which the council has received complaints for several years will have its business licence cancelled.

Council has on another occasion warned the firm to cease parking in areas not designated for taxi parking and recently instructed the local traffic officer to enforce the parking bylaws without suitable results. Council is investigating means of cancelling the licence.

Sewer Problem

Council permitted a land development firm to attach to the Campbell River sewer line even though the development lies outside municipal boundaries and the connection has been unsatisfactory because of a faulty pump.

Council has requested the developer to remedy the condition without results. He is to receive an ultimatum — correct the condition or the municipality will, at the developer's expense. Campbell River school board has a dilemma. The concert association is trying to bring culture to the community and to the students by engaging the Victoria Symphony and individual artists. However, a good grand piano is an expected requirement and there isn't one in the town.

Soup Favored

The school board has the only reasonable concert hall at the junior high school, but there is no space available there to store a piano if one was obtained.

A request for permission to install vending machines in the schools caused considerable discussion.

The idea was approved in principle but on the motion of Dr. Ross, installation of cigarette machines was prohibited. John Young of the senior high favored machines, but said he was opposed to cigarette machines. He felt that the lack of a school lunch room or cafeteria could be slightly alleviated by the installation of machines that would sell hot soup, hot drinks and milk.

Indian Worry

School trustee Al Lacroix was concerned with the small list of electors from the three Indian bands in the immediate area, but was assured by the administration that they had advertised written letters and Phil Sampson, secretary, had attended meetings to try and promote the inclusion of Indian names on the electors list. The list is being kept open until Oct. 1 in hope that people at Cape Mudge Village Spit reserve and Quinsam will register.

Bilingual

The school board was told that John Young has been appointed to represent B.C. members of the Canadian Teachers' Federation in a special committee being set up by the federation to study some form of amalgamation with French-speaking teacher groups from Quebec and the implementation of the B and R report. All representatives on the committee are required to be bilingual.

Mobile Units Obsolete

No longer needed, mobile housing units are towed away from Gold River. Units were brought to house men working on construction projects at townsite, and formed part of the construction camp there. It is sign that most major construction in town—such as houses, shopping plaza and apartment buildings—is close to completion.

Vertebra Patient Walks

A Victoria man given a metal vertebra in what was believed to be the first operation of its kind, has started to walk again, a Royal Jubilee Hospital spokesman said Tuesday.

This is a very significant step in his progress back to complete health," said Clifford Brown, executive assistant to hospital director Dr. A. C. Pickles.

The patient, a man in his 60s, has not been identified. He was given the metal vertebra as a replacement for a diseased bone in a six-hour operation Aug. 2.

$2,000,000 for Schools

Sooke Votes in March

By BILL STAVDAL

Ratepayers of Sooke school district will vote next March on a building referendum that may total $2,000,000.

The district is faced with an enrolment increase of 36 per cent in the next three years, according to estimates presented to the school board Tuesday by superintendent E. E. Hyndman.

The district, which now has 4,939 pupils, will have to educate 6,740 by September, 1971, Mr. Hyndman's forecast said.

His preliminary estimate of building requirements called for the equivalent of 50 more classrooms, plus land acquisition.

Mr. Hyndman made no cost estimate before the board and declined to speculate on what the referendum will total. He said it will be "over $1,000,000" but "nowhere near" the forthcoming $4,000,000 referendum in Sanich School District, which is the same size as Sooke.

The school board will need latitude to complete its requirements, Mr. Hyndman said.

The $2,000,000 estimate is based on a projection of current building costs.

The school board set March 29 — last Saturday of the month — as the date of the referendum.

The trustees also authorized construction of three "emergency classrooms" for use by September, 1969.

One will be built at Colwood

Elementary School and two at Savory Elementary. All three will be built within existing covered play areas.

Money will come from left-over funds from the district's last referendum.

Mr. Hyndman, in his report to the board, said "a substantial program" is needed to meet essential classroom space.

He estimated a 10 per cent enrolment growth in the next year, another 10 per cent the year following, plus an 11 per cent jump the year after. Compounded, it amounts to a 36 per cent increase.

The school board appointed Mr. Hyndman its co-ordinator to plan the referendum.

Convention Centre

Tourist Men Back Empress Project

The proposal to build a convention centre adjacent to the Empress Hotel received unanimous endorsement from representatives of five major divisions of the local tourist industry Tuesday night.

About 40 operators from Greater Victoria hotels, restaurants, sightseeing attractions and the transportation industry met at the Empress Hotel and for two hours discussed the controversial plan.

Sam Lane, proprietor of Olde England Inn, said, after the meeting, that there was unanimity of opinion among the industry representatives. He said the meeting would be solidly behind city council if it decided to go ahead with the proposal made by Marathon Realty, land-holding arm of the CPR.

'PLUGGED IN'

The plan, as outlined to members of city council late in August, would see the city build a $2,500,000 centre on the northern end of the parking lot to the east of the hotel.

It would be a "plugged in" facility, drawing essential services from the hotel which would undertake to alter two floors in the Humboldt Street wing to fit in with the needs of a convention centre.

Not only did the meeting endorse the proposal, but the resolution urged city council to get on with the plan, Mr. Lane said.

ENDORSEMENT

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, chairman of city council's convention centre committee, was at the meeting and answered questions put to him.

The resolution of endorsement was moved by Peter G. Hartnell, of Queen Victoria Inn, and seconded by Pat Frumento, manager, Black Ball Ferries.

Leonard Ingraham, president of the local branch of the Victoria Hotel Association, said it was pointed out at the meeting that if Victoria did not get moving soon on a convention centre it might well be beaten out by Nanaimo which was starting to consider the matter seriously.

INFORMAL MEETING

It was stressed, however, that the meeting was an informal gathering of tourist industry operators and not under the auspices of the hotel association or any other organization.

Most aldermen, along with Mayor Hugh Stephen, have indicated that they favor the project.

Lottery Livens Bids for Land

A crowd of 400 turned up Tuesday when the mines and petroleum resources department disposed of B.C. oil and gas exploration permits by lottery.

The draw, a procedure provided for under laws covering mineral exploration rights, was substituted for the usual bonus bid system because, officials said, there had been a long-standing lack of interest in the lands.

At stake were 8,702,134 acres in the Peace River block of northeastern B.C. and 208,908 acres in the Fraser Valley.

Entrants in the draw—there were 411 registered, but interest died after the first six winners were announced—were mainly employees of oil companies or law firms. Some were recruited locally through personal or business connections and included university students.

Any citizen was eligible to enter the draw, and recruiting was carried out by oil interests so that they would have a greater chance of winning a draw.

No Debate For Opponents

There will be no debate between Sanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and Gordon Campbell on the subject of the forthcoming sewerage consolidation referendum.

But Mr. Campbell, a proponent of land disposal of sewage and an opponent of the referendum, will be given about 30 minutes to express his views at the public information meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in Gordon Head elementary school. Ald. Leslie Passmore said Tuesday night, speaking for the mayor.

Victorian Thrown

DUNCAN — Thomas Godfrey, 40, of 1124 Topaz, Victoria, was discharged from Cowichan District Hospital after being treated for minor injuries which he received when a Ready Mix cement truck rolled over at Riverbottom Road.

Police said the truck, belonging to Butler Brothers and valued at about $10,000, was demolished.

The accident apparently occurred on a long, steep hill when the truck lost air from its brake system.

Police said that Mr. Godfrey was apparently thrown clear.

Spending Exceeds Ottawa Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will exceed its self-imposed spending target by $335,000,000 in the current fiscal year according to revised estimates brought before Parliament Wednesday.

Rapidly rising payments to programs under provincial control will wipe out a long list of federal budget cuts, leaving the government with record spending of $12,331,930,598, the estimates forecast.

The figure includes a first-year cost of $33,000,000 for medical care insurance and a separate bill for old age pensions of $1,581,000,000.

NEW DEPARTMENTS

The government's reorganization of departments made the revision of estimates necessary.

In the Commons, opposition MPs were quick to notice the escalating costs and to ask what had happened since the original estimates for the fiscal year ending next March 31 were tabled seven months ago.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury started to reply, conceding "an increase in the total," and was drowned out by opposition boos and jeers.

DEBT COSTS

The total amount is three per cent more than the $11,863,732,032 included in the original estimates.

Payments towards hospital insurance, welfare and post-secondary education programs together show increases of $229,000,000 from the February 1968-69 estimate.

Public debt costs are up by $67,157,700 to $1,474,005,900.

Both Finance Minister Edgar Benson and his predecessor Mitchell Sharp have promised to hold budgetary spending this year to $10,300,000,000, apart from medical care insurance costs.

The part of the estimates defined as "budgetary" total $10,670,930,598 in the revised forecasts released Wednesday. The total in February's original estimates was $10,284,732,032.

There were cuts in all branches of government except the appropriations for the office

Trudeau Cuts At Home

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has reduced expenses at his official residence by $800 — two per cent — as part of the government's cost-cutting program in the current fiscal year.

Revised estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday provided $10,300 for the prime minister's residence, down from $11,100, in the original estimates last February.

The total budget is reduced $500 to $2,700, entertainment by $200 to $2,500 and household salaries $200 to $2,300.

Trudeau, in line with past practice, has $3,000 deducted from his $45,000 salary to help meet the expenses of running the prime minister's residence.

Road to Democracy

Troop-Flouting Czechs Still Planning Reform

PRAGUE (AP) — With more than 500,000 Warsaw Pact troops still occupying Czechoslovakia, the nation's reform-minded Communist party reaffirmed Wednesday it will press on with reforms designed to make the party function more democratically.

The new statutes would provide such reforms as secret balloting and publication of minority opinions. Both are in opposition to Moscow-style communism.

The reassertion came against a background of delays in a trip to Moscow by the Czechoslovak leadership to discuss further Soviet demands aimed at curbing liberal reforms and a withdrawal of some of the troops.

There were rumors that Soviet and Czechoslovak leaders had sharp differences over the composition of the Czechoslovak delegation and over the agenda.

The reassertion to proceed with the party reform came in a Rude Pravo interview with R. Filus, chief of the central committee's organizational and political section. Rude Pravo is the official organ of the Czechoslovak party.

The draft statutes are to be voted on at the party's 14th congress, at a date not yet set.

Clemency Recommended

Woman Convicted In Death Plot

TORONTO (CP) — After deliberating for eight hours Wednesday, an all-male jury found 26-year-old Diane Stefaniuszyn of Toronto guilty of counselling a service station operator to murder her lover's wife last February. (Earlier story, Page 29.)

She had pleaded not guilty to offering Kenneth Fews of Toronto $500 to run down and kill with a car Sophie Ducia, 33.

The Ontario Supreme Court jury recommended clemency on the grounds of Miss Stefaniuszyn's emotional instability. Mr. Justice Frank Danelly, who has presided over the six-day trial, discontinued $25,000 bail and remanded Miss Stefaniuszyn in custody to Oct. 21 for sentencing.

In dismissing the jury, Mr. Justice Danelly said that on the evidence heard, he could see no other verdict.

Acts in Good Faith No Sin

● Liberal Dutch scholar faces Vatican heresy trial. Page 10.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Maurice Cardinal Roy, Roman Catholic primate of Canada, said Wednesday those who use contraceptive measures in good faith are not guilty of a sin.

"That is the general principle of moral theology," Cardinal Roy told a news conference at the Canadian Catholic Conference. (See also Page 10.)

"If one is in good faith, even if his idea is wrong, he is not guilty of a sin. But to be in good faith, one must be prudent."

"You must have serious reasons and not only just an impression of the moment."

The cardinal, here to take part in the semi-annual meeting of Canadian bishops, was replying to a question on the Pope's encyclical.

He said he was agreeing with a statement by bishops in Belgium that said Catholics should follow an informed conscience.

The 80 bishops attending the conference are trying to map out a statement on the encyclical to be released Thursday night for guidance of Canada's 8,500,000 Catholics.

"I don't want to prejudice what the bishops will say," the cardinal said. "This has to be said very carefully."

"We have to deal with those who have not understood, have not accepted, the truth or live (of the encyclical) and then we have to say are they in sin or not in sin."

Bishop G. Emmett Carter of London, Ont., said earlier the conference is not trying to write a new encyclical but only trying to offer guidance on its application.

He said the encyclical is accepted as a fact.

Asked if he brought any message from Rome to the bishops to help them in their deliberations, the cardinal said there was no official message but that he "will take part in discussion and bring them my personal assistance."

The cardinal, who is also Archbishop of Quebec, arrived here from Rome earlier Wednesday.

He is president of a pontifical commission on justice and peace and also of a lay council, both with headquarters in Rome.

The cardinal said the lay commission meetings are developing slowly because various countries do not want a council in Rome to "control the national organization."

The justice and peace commission deals with study of political, economic and social conditions throughout the world. It advises the Pope prior to his making statements dealing with church policy on such matters.

Cardinal Roy said the biggest problem faced by the commission is one of motivation.

He said it is necessary to motivate peoples of the world to do a little more toward helping developing countries and poverty-stricken regions.

LET PROVINCES NAME SENATORS, SAYS B.C.

By IAN STREET, Legislative Reporter

B.C. will propose at the next federal-provincial conference on the constitution that the provinces be given the right to appoint senators, with representation being determined on a population basis, Premier Bennett announced Wednesday.

The premier told a press conference that the provincial government would take a firm position that the senate should either be "reorganized" or abolished.

He also said B.C. was seeking a "fix" on the purchasing power of Canadians from coast to coast. The way to correct regional disparity, the premier added, was to cancel the present equalization payments to the poorer provinces in favor of financial assistance provided directly to those in the low-income group.

UNIFORM STANDARD

A start could be made, Mr. Bennett suggested, with those in the worst-paid ranks of the labor force by adopting a uniform minimum wage standard across Canada.

The press conference took place when the premier advised reporters of his plan to travel by PGE train to Saturday ceremonies marking the turning on of power generated at the W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River. Other participants and invited guests are travelling to Portage Mountain in three chartered aircraft.

Mr. Bennett said he would not tell his critics, "I told you so," now that the giant project had been virtually completed.

ANSWER ENOUGH

"When the power from the Peace hits Vancouver, that will be answer enough. This will be the brightest day in our history for the people of British Columbia. I remember all the scoffers, the critics who said it couldn't be done, we couldn't transmit power over that distance, and that the government should be kicked out of office."

The premier said the province's two-river policy had worked "wonderfully well" and added: "I don't blame the critics — I just feel sorry for them."

Mr. Bennett said the proposal for appointment of senate representatives

Johnson Warning

Johnson

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Premier Daniel Johnson warned France Wednesday in effect to stay out of Quebec's troubles with English-speaking Canada if it values the province as the biggest French-language bastion of the New World.

"If I believed that in our relations with France the French were trying to destroy our country, I would consider it my duty not to continue relations with France," Johnson told a nationally televised and broadcast news conference.

He added that French President de Gaulle, who shocked Canadians during a visit here last year by telling a crowd "Vive Quebec Libre" — "Long Live Free Quebec" — "can have his opinions on the Canadian Confederation, and we can have our own. (See also Page 26.)

SETTLED HERE

"This problem will be settled in Canada," he said.

Johnson, who flies to Paris next month for talks with de Gaulle and a reception normally reserved for heads of state, spelled out his stand on the French government's possible influence on Quebec policies at his first news conference since he suffered a heart attack July 3. He returned here last week from a holiday in Bermuda.

He said that mounting reports of French moves to interfere in the future of Quebec, a province that is bigger than France

Question Shuffle Flayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced a "trial" system Wednesday whereby cabinet ministers will not have to be in the Commons for every daily question period. The plan drew sharp opposition criticism.

Trudeau told the House that all ministers would try to attend the question period on Wednesdays and two other days. He would aim for daily attendance.

At present, all ministers available in the capital attend the question session daily. The question periods, by House rules, last from 30 minutes to one hour. Only a half hour is set aside Wednesday.

Union Official Out of Prison

VANCOUVER (CP) — Homer Stevens, 44, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, was released from prison Wednesday after serving more than 10 months of a one-year sentence for contempt of court.

Stevens and union president H. (Steve) Stavones were jailed after they refused to order workers to handle fish during a strike in Prince Rupert, as directed by a B.C. Supreme Court injunction.

'Are You Going All the Way?'

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — A newspaper reporter who tried to buy an airline ticket at Philadelphia International Airport while wearing a parachute found that the airlines want no part of do-it-yourself safety programs.

Pottstown Mercury editor Robert Boyle assigned Gary Catt, 22, to the story and it was printed Wednesday.

Catt walked into the airport's main building with the parachute strapped on his back and immediately found a security guard with a walkie-talkie following him up the escalator.

The reporter stood in line at the United Airlines counter. Several army paratroopers in the next line stared at him and one finally asked where he was headed. Catt told him New York.

Without cracking a smile, one paratrooper asked, "You planning to get out some-where between here and there?" Catt tried to ignore him.

Catt drew the stares of countless passersby, and one porter backed up his hand-truck about 15 feet to take a second look.

When he reached the counter, the woman clerk asked him what he had on his back and he replied, "A parachute. It's my first trip and I'm scared."

The clerk decided to check with the manager, who told Catt to take off the chute or he couldn't get a ticket.

Catt decided to try American Airlines and again was confronted by the manager.

This one told him that wearing a parachute might "create panic" among the other passengers and result in a lack of faith in the reliability and safety of our airline.

Catt refused to check his parachute with the baggage and did not get a ticket.

As Catt was leaving, he heard one man ask another, "Are they giving parachutes to all passengers?"

Armed Forces Ranks Fall Below 100,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower (fax East) and Douglas Harkness (PC-Calgary Centre), Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said, strength of the armed forces at July 1 was 99,817 compared with 104,604 at Jan. 1. The number of officers declined by 586 to 11,793 and the number of men by 4,201 to 82,024.
